VICTIMS TELL OF EXPLOSION

Men Who Were Burned When Captain Fotland Lost Life Give Evidence

Their faces completely masked with bandages covering the burns they sustained in the explosion aboard the American halibut schooner Lincoln, Louis Tweeten and Hens Berg, members of the crew of the ill-fated vessel, gave their evidence this morning at the inquest in session before Coroner Dr. W. Sager of Port Simpson into the death of Capt. Martin Fotland, master of the boat. Other witnesses were Dr. J. P. Gade, Sgt. Hannah, John Fenness of the Imperial Oil Co. staff and A. M. Prince, forestry engineer. More witnesses are to be heard and shortly before 1 o'clock the inquest was adjourned until 2.30. In attendance at the inquest are G. A. Woodland, manager of the Imperial Oil Co. at whose dock the accident occurred, and L. W. Patmore, counsel for the company.

Dr. Gade stated that death was due to monoxide poisoning or suffocation and it had been almost instantaneous. The doctor described a number of burns on the body but stated they had not been the direct cause of death.

Louis Tweeten told of loading oil on the day in question about noon. One of the tanks had overflowed. Witness told of Capt. Fotland being overcome in the engine room and being removed therefrom and brought to. About half an hour later, the captain went down again to start the engine. Witness saw him priming the engine but could not see him throw in the switch. The flywheel had just been turned over slightly when the explosion occurred. The explosion, witness said, seemed to be in the fo'c'sle. He (witness) was about fifteen feet away from the engine room on the deck but he could see into the engine room. He was thrown on to the fish in the hatch from which he crawled, going up the ladder on to the wharf.

Overflow of Gas

Under examination by Mr. Patmore, Tweeten stated the boni was fast to the dock. It was not customary to loosen the lines until the engine was started. The engine room was located forward on the boat with the tanks around. The overflow of gasoline had been in the engine room and not on deck. It was quite a common occurrence, witness said, for the tanks to overflow when gas was being taken on. The valves feeding the oil into the tanks were controlled by the men on the boat, and they were responsible if there was an overflow. There were ventilators on the boat, one of these going out through a mast. The ventilators usually worked effectively. There was no fire in the cook stove which was aft on the boat nor was there a fire anywhere else. Witness said he had spoken to the captain after he had been overcome the first time. Fotland had mentioned "a funny taste in his mouth," but had not said anything about gasoline fumes nor had he said that he was afraid to go down into the engine room again. The boat sunk almost at once after the explosion.

The evidence of Hans Berg was largely similar to that of Tweeten.

REV. E. G. TURNER ASKED TO REMAIN

At the regular Sunday evening service held in the Baptist Church yesterday, J. Harvey, as chairman of the board of deacons, presented a petition to the pastor, Rev. E. G. Turner, extensively signed by members of the church and congregation.

The petition expressed high appreciation of the work and leadership of the pastor, and the confidence and esteem in which he is held by all, and sincerely regretted his resignation as pastor of the church, and urged him to reconsider his action and if at all possible to continue his work and ministry in Prince Rupert.

Mr. Harvey in a few well chosen words voiced the feeling of the people toward the pastor which gave birth to the petition.

In receiving the petition Mr. Turner accepted it in the kindly feeling in which it was presented and promised it would receive his earnest consideration. The church will await his decision with hopeful anticipation.

HERE'S what is in every familiar red and white labelled can of Carnation Milk:

1. Perfect Purity—Clean, fresh milk, scrupulously guarded until the hermetically-sealed cans are sterilized.
2. High Food Value—All the food value of full-cream milk concentrated to double richness.
3. Creamy Smoothness—Carnation's creamy double-richness improves the texture of foods cooked with this milk.
4. Economy—Undiluted and double-rich, in place of cream, it reduces cream bills approximately two-thirds.

Prove these virtues yourself. Get Carnation next time. Send for free copy of Mary Blake's Cook Book. Address Carnation Milk Products Co., Limited, Aylmer, Ontario.
