WESTERN OUTLET PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

RUBY DOLAN CONFESSES SHOOTING MAN; CLAIMS TRIED TO FRIGHTEN HIM

Engineers Report on Peace River Route to Pacific Coast Received Ottawa Discusses Prince Rupert

It will not be economic possibility for some time; outlet through Berwin is favored

OTTAWA, June 11.—A railway outlet from Peace River to the coast will not be an economic possibility for some time to come, according to a report of five railway engineers, who have investigated the situation on behalf of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways.

Discussing the relative merits of the proposed routes, that direct to Vancouver or Prince Rupert, the report states: "Certain interests intimate that a study of the problem is incomplete without proper weight being given to that vast potential territory tributary to the northern part of the Peace River and Great Slave Lake. We fully agree with this. The natural western outlet for their potential products must pass through a common point at or near Berwin, which is 15 miles west of Peace River Crossing." To ascertain the best operating route to the coast for these products and to find the best route from Berwin to Vancouver it is proposed to choose from the following western routes:

Obed route.
Monkman Pass and C.N.R. route.
Monkman Pass, Pacific Great Eastern and Canadian Pacific route.
Peace Pass and C.N.R. route.
Peace Pass, P.G.E. and C.P.R. route.

The report finds that the Obed route offers less miles and least train miles of any of the alternative routes to Vancouver. "When the traffic develops to amount to six or eight times the assumed initial traffic, over thirty times the present average, all going to Vancouver or Prince Rupert, construction of the Obed line would be justified," the report states.

Dr. James Endicott, secretary of the foreign missions board, was last night elected moderator of the United Church of Canada at the opening session of the second general council. The election was unanimous, there being no other nominations.

Dr. Endicott was born in Devonshire, England, in 1865, and educated at the English schools and Wesley College, Winnipeg. He entered the missionary service of the Methodist Church first at home and then in West China. He served under the old council conference in 1887 and later in Lethbridge and Manitoba towns.

Mr. Justice W. A. MacDonald instructed the Grand Jury on the case this morning defining the nature of the charges and reviewing the evidence that would be submitted. Details of the alleged occurrence in McLymont Park were mentioned, the judge closing his remarks with the admonition that the Grand Jury should decide the matter before them strictly on the merits of the case without regard to standing of accused in the community or any other influence.

The Grand Jury has not yet given its finding in the case of Rex vs. Gladys Dale, having been instructed to leave the matter in abeyance until the trial of Ruby Dolan, now proceeding, had been completed.

The robbery with which they are charged, was one of the most dastardly ever known in the west and resulted in the death of three members of the train crew, when they resisted, and one mail clerk lost his life when his car was dynamited in a vain search for loot. The bandits fled empty handed.

Ruby Dolan Confesses to Shooting of Donald But Did Not Intend To

Confessing to having killed the man with a revolver but without intent to do so, Ruby Dolan, neatly dressed and of slender build, hardly bearing the appearance of such a woman as she is described, is now on trial at the Supreme Court Assizes charged with the murder of James Neil Donald on the early morning of January 1 in the house at Stewart of which she was an occupant. A true bill having been returned by the Grand Jury against the woman yesterday afternoon, hearing of the case commenced before the petit jury. The afternoon was spent in the taking of evidence which was continued this morning. With the addresses of counsel—A. M. Johnson, K.C. for the crown and Hon. J. W. de B. Farris, K.C. for the defence—and the charge of Mr. Justice W. A. MacDonald completed, the jury at an early hour this afternoon retired to consider its verdict.

Delay was encountered in starting the trial yesterday afternoon when the Grand Jury, through error in typewriting the bill, returned the Gladys Gale indictment endorsed with a true bill against Ruby Dolan. This was rectified by having the Grand Jury return to the courtroom to receive and come back with the proper document.

On the bill being presented, accused was brought into the courtroom accompanied by Mrs. Sam North, police matron. Slender and of somewhat over average height, of rather dark complexion and wearing eye glasses, accused was apparently controlling nervousness as her trial proceeded. She was dressed neatly in a gray blanket cloth coat over a simple blue silk dress with gray hat. In a low trembling voice, she pleaded "not guilty" after the charge had been read to her.

Hon. J. W. de B. Farris announced that he was appearing for accused and would be assisted by Milton Gonzales. The empanelling of the jury then commenced and, after many challenges by the defence and a number of stand asides by the crown, the following were selected: Frank Morris, foreman, Frank A. Stevens, R. G. Cunningham, John J. Judge, Peter J. Solem, Howard Steen, J. J. Muldoon, Bert Morgan, Malcolm McLeod, Ernest A. Morgan, William H. McCallum and Joseph Slaggard.

D. McD. Hunter, John R. Deane, Mrs. Margaret Grieve, T. W. Silversides, Mrs. Kate E. Mastin, John Bremner, William Gilchrist, D. C. Stuart, J. C. Gavigan, W. G. Oakley, William Sibbald, W. H. Shortridge, Mrs. Agnes Glennie, John Gawthorn, George Sellars, John McRae and Mrs. Sarah C. Lambie were challenged by the defence and John O. Williamson, Eddie Glapp, Peter Black, Albert Freebourn, John Flewin, K. A. Rood and Ernest Unwin were stood aside by the crown.

In reviewing the case for the crown, Mr. Johnson stated that evidence would be adduced to show that James Neil Donald, alleged to have been killed at Stewart on the morning of January 1, had come to his death in a house of prostitution as a result of a bullet wound. Accused and the other woman, Gladys Gale, in whose house the killing was alleged to have taken place, were commonly called prostitutes but this, Mr. Johnson warned the jury, should not (continued on page four)

While crossing the lower end of Queen Charlotte Sound, heavy seas were encountered and the dead child's dog was washed overboard. Eventually the little craft arrived here, where the funeral was held.
