Beautiful Story of Rosebush Adapted into Modern Tale is "Revelation" Here This Week

A rosebush of a Thousand Years, which grew in the courtyard of a French monastery, had a legend that remained ever fresh in the minds of the brothers. It was a miracle in modern times.

Years ago, according to the legend, a pious monk planted a rose bush. In spite of his tender care it never blossomed. The gentle monk brooded over it, considering it an evidence of divine displeasure. One day he prayed at the side of the bush that it might bloom. In the midst of his supplication a gentle voice bade him "Be at peace," and looking up he saw the Holy Mother standing before him—and lo, a miracle!—the rose bush had burst into bloom.

Modern Story
In a French village, not far from Paris, a young mother one day walks slowly to the door of a convent. Peniless and disgraced in the eyes of the world, she can do only one thing. A half hour later she leaves, and a baby snuggles in the arms of a protecting Sister.

The Three Delights
A year later this girl can be seen in "The Cafe of Three Delights," the favorite rendezvous of the Montmartre, where she has become known as Joline, "the daughter of joy." The down-trodden creature of yore is now a wild, untrammelled grisette—admired and sought by men.

Two men especially want her, Count Adrian De Boche and Paul Granville, a poor American artist. Moved by the latter's poverty, Joline offers to pose for him without pay, while Count Adrian tries every possible way to win her affection. Inspired by his model, Paul at last wins success in the Salon with his paintings of famous women of history—Cleopatra, Sappho, Salome. With money, plenty, he and Joline enjoy a life of luxury and love.

The Wild Little Model
Then Count Adrian finds a way he thinks will throw Joline into his own arms. He has heard about the old monastery and the legend of the rose bush, and suggests that Paul go there and make a painting. His idea is that Joline will not do as a model for a Madonna, as her type is not exactly saintly, and that therefore she will be separated from Paul. Joline, however, frustrates this scheme when Paul decides to do the subject, by furiously fighting other applicants for the job.

Having received permission to work at the painting in the courtyard while the monks are in the chapel, Paul arrives at the monastery with Joline dressed as a boy so that she can get by the gate. Once in, she changes to the costume of the Madonna, and poses beside the rose bush.

Modern Miracle
Brother Augustin, sick and dying because the famous rose bush is not blooming, and believing it to be the result of his sins, stumbles down while the brothers are at service and kneels hazily before his shrine. Suddenly he looks up and sees the Madonna of the legend, with the light of Heaven in her eyes. It is, of course, merely Joline, but the Monk believes his prayers have been answered and he is forgiven. He faints under the excitement just as the chapel service ends, and Paul and Joline are forced to flee.

The fame of the new "miracle" spreads until Joline can stand her gull no longer. She goes to the good Prior of the monastery and confesses it was merely she whom poor Brother Augustin took to be the Madonna. The Prior is shocked, because Brother Augustin has died in the meanwhile, but tells her it is still a miracle.

He leads the girl to the window and shows her the rose bush once again in full bloom. "All chosen times," he says, "the spirit of the Holy Mother looks through the eyes of a good woman."

The Revelation
Joline at last sees the light—a revelation has come into her soul. She prays for strength to live without Paul, and make atonement. Deaf to his appeals to return with him to Paris, she goes to work among the peasants, and as soon as she gets enough money together, goes to the convent for her baby, now grown into a bouncing boy of five.

One day Paul, on a motor tour, nearly runs over a boy in a small village. The mother rushes to her child. It is Joline. Explanations are made between her and Paul, and when the boy and the artist discover a great affection for each other, Joline agrees to marry. Then, in front of the rose bush where she found her soul, the Prior makes Joline the wife of Paul.

"THE SADDLE HAWK" HOOT GIBSON STORY

Play is to be Here for one Night Only this Week

Ben Johnson, known far and wide as "The Saddle Hawk" by reason of his miraculous ability to strike hard and unexpectedly and to be away, whirling on his mighty horse into some secret place of hiding, was at bay. He was facing the most desperate situation of his desperate career.

In the upper room of the house in which he was striving for mastery of the situation, the girl he had sworn to place in her father's arms was a prisoner of the leader of the most desperate outlaws in the entire country round.

"The Saddle Hawk," a fugitive from the law, was supposed to be one of them, but he knew that he was under suspicion as a spy—possibly a man whose purpose was to liberate the girl.

The terrific tension increased when a man entered and announced "The Saddle Hawk" as a spy and in the same breath said that the sheriff was coming.

"The Saddle Hawk" flashed a sudden menace in the shape of a six-shooter, and leaped up the stairway. From below came the crash of desperate men in desperate battle, but "The Saddle Hawk" found that some one had preceded him and that the girl was gone—and the smoke of shooting left more than one man dead—and the girl.

The picture is to be seen here tonight.

BEBE DANELS SEEN IN LOVERS' QUARANTINE

Curious Situation When Man Elopes with the Wrong Girl and is Held by Authorities

Bebe Daniels' newest Paramount starring production at the Westholme this week, Lovers in Quarantine, is an unusual picture—unusual because it is one of the few screen versions of famous Broadway stage successes to come up to the legitimate play for entertainment.

Harrison Ford is featured opposite the star. He is an explorer, in love with Bebe's elder sister Pamela. Bebe, as Diana Gordon, a harum-scarum, impossible tomboy, has a crush on him.

During Tony Blunt's (Ford) two years in the jungles, Pamela has become engaged to another man, his unexpected return sort of takes her by surprise. Knowing that there will be no end of explaining to be done, Pam has Diana entertain him until she can get rid of her new fiance.

Tony, impatient for a sight of Pam, is annoyed at the carryings-on of the impetuous Diana. Pam finally arrives on the scene and dismisses Diana with a wave of the hand. Indignant, and curious to learn how her sister will explain her approaching marriage to Mack Joseph, Diana eavesdrops and hears Tony and Pamela plan to elope that night.

Diana, however, is not one to give up a man so easily, so as sailing "fine" approaches she locks Pamela in a closet and with a spindler chaperone usurps Pamela's cabin. For three days Diana remains in her cabin pleading off as ill, while the curious, gossiping passengers discuss the unfortunate predicament of the groom whose honeymoon companion is ill.

Then when Diana finally does come out and Tony discovers that he has eloped with the wrong girl! What a situation it is! And to make matters worse all the passengers on the boat are ordered to a quarantine island where more complications arise for the "bride and groom."

MAKING OF O'MALLY SILLS FIRST PICTURE

Society Girl and Policeman Linked with much Heart Interest

Heart interest, pathos, tragedy, love, suspense, thrills, laughs, excitement—all these are found in "The Making of O'Malley," the big First National feature picture which comes at the weekend.

This is Milton Sills' first starring vehicle, and he is seen at his best in the role of a New York policeman. The story is laid in New York and interweaves

An Infallible Guard

HEIMDAL, according to Celtic mythology, was the perfect sentinel. His hearing was so acute that he could hear the wool growing on a sheep's back. His eyesight was so keen he could see everything that happened even though it occurred while he slept.

Advertising, if you use it properly, is an infallible sentinel for you. It guards you against fraud and inferiority. It protects you against making unwise and unsatisfactory purchases.

Merchants and manufacturers who advertise must give full value because they have good names to protect. The makers of well-known products and the stores that sell these products often value the names at millions of dollars. They cannot afford to jeopardize the worth of these names by selling any but good goods of full measure and fair price.

So, you can bank on this. Advertised goods must be as advertised. That is why it pays to deal with advertisers and to buy advertised products.

Advertising is your guard

The lives of a society girl who has tired of her social position and the policeman. There is a beautiful love theme running through the plot, at the end of which the policeman wins the wealthy girl. But the refining influence of the woman has had its effect on this two-fisted man of the force, and lifts him up to a higher and finer appreciation of life. In short, O'Malley is a re-made man when the picture ends.

Not even in "The Sea Hawk" did Sills battle more effectively than he does in this picture. But beneath the gruffness of the "cop" lies a kindly spirit. Within his breast is a heart softened by pity and sentiment.

TROUBLES OF MOTION PICTURE MAKING

Mary Pickford Party Reassembled and Sets Have to be Rebuilt for "Scraps."

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 18.—Day by day more reasons are found why motion picture producers age prematurely.

Two months ago Mary Pickford completed her new picture, "Scraps." The company was dismissed, the sets dismantled and the editing and tiling started.

The other day it was discovered that added scenes were needed. E. deB. Newman, Miss Pickford's manager, was notified to rebuild two sets, reassemble the company and "complete the picture."

Two of the children, Camilla and Sessel Ann Johnston are in the state of Mississippi. Both are absolutely essential to the added shots.

Much of the furniture used was rented, and some has since been sold, so it was necessary to build the needed articles. The baby in the picture was out of town on a vacation. Newman is now trying to get the cast together, and prepare the sets. He hopes to be able to do so in a matter of two weeks.

"Although we had taken several hundred thousand feet of film, we needed just a few more," said the puzzled Mr. Newman, as he started to figure out just how much per foot this additional film is going to cost. The Mary Pickford Company.
