MA FERGUSON'S PRIVATE LIFE

Texas Governor is Just Plain Woman—She Cares Little For Social Life

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 5. — The homely cackle of the chicken yard or the quiet of a rose garden give Miriam A. Ferguson surcease from the turmoil which sometimes swirls about the governor's chair.

A glimpse of the intimate life of the woman governor was caught when, at the heighth of the politico-highway controversy, she slipped away to trim her rose bushes, buy clothes in Temple, her home town, and incidentally pay her poll tax.

Despite the fairy stories about Mrs. Ferguson, homely and beautiful, big and little, ignorant and intelligent, here are some actual facts about her:

She feeds her chicks.

Eats "poor man's bread" and turnip greens.

Wears low-heeled shoes.

Drives her automobile.

Does not wear bobbed hair.

Spreads on a little rouge.

Does not care for "society."

Does not smoke.

Occasionally tells Jim, her husband, where to head in.

Does not permit Jim to keep a cow in the mansion yard.

Not High-toned

Mrs. Ferguson does not put on high-toned airs. She dresses neatly. Last summer she wore light organdie dresses of mild shades. This fall and winter her gowns run to dark colors, blue and black satin. She prefers black or tan shoes, according to the dress she is wearing.

The governor's hair is black streaked with gray, and is worn in a coil around her head.

Her usual office hours are from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. She and her husband frequently occupy opposite sides of a flat top desk, dividing the work between them. Sometimes Mr. Ferguson, the former governor, uses an ante room next to the executive office for consulting visitors, while his wife sits within the executive office proper interviewing callers.

She is Boss

Mrs. Ferguson has been known to thump the flat top desk with her womanly fist and inform Jim just who is governor.

She takes time from work to chat with women secretaries in the office about everyday things women are interested in.

On the second floor of the capitol is a small room, reached from the governor's office by a private iron stairway, where the governor may disappear for rest or study.

Mrs. Ferguson's chief interest is Jim Ferguson, and when she dons her kitchen apron to "fix something special for Jim," it generally means one of those Texas dishes, not the least of which is the poor man's corn bread made without milk or eggs.

Gets $4,000 a Year

She cares little for social life and most of her entertaining is done when "folks just drop in." The state pays her $4,000 a year salary, one of the smallest governor's salaries in the Union, and allows her $5,000 a year expenses for the mansion, including maintenance of the grounds, ice, fuel and light.

The city council last night adopted a report from the finance committee providing for the payment of $125 to J. C. McLennan for services as census enumerator this year. These duties were undertaken by Mr. McLennan in addition to his regular work as assessor.

ALASKA NATIVE WINS DAMAGE SUIT FROM STEAMSHIP COMPANY

JUNEAU, Jan. 5.— Dan Katzeek, a native Alaska Indian, was awarded $5,000 damages by the jury which heard his case against the Alaska Steamship Company in which he sought to recover $30,000 for injuries received in 1923.

Katzeek was injured when a shackle securing a boom stay on the freighter Cordova gave way as a boiler was being hoisted over the side, the loosened cable end lashing out and striking Katzeek in the back and inflicting permanent injuries upon him. The accident occured at the Haines Packing Company's plant at the mouth of the Chilkat river on May 30, 1924. The case was tried before Judge Reed and a jury in the district court here.

UNEMPLOYED LIST HERE IS GROWING

One Hundred Men Now Jobless in City—50 Arrive From Interior

Owing to the mild weather in the interior and the consequent absence of snow, making it impossible to haul ties and poles from the bush, fifty men came in from interior points over the week end according to J. Campbell, government employment agent. There is a total of one hundred men now in the city needing employment. At present there is no demand for labor of any description.

MRS. ZIMBALIST SELLS HER HOME

Alma Gluck Made Original Purchase With Proceeds of Sale of Record

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. — Mrs. Efrem Zimbalist, known on the opera stage as Alma Gluck, revealed that she had sold her home at 101 East 72nd Street at a profit of more than 100 per cent.

Mrs. Zimbalist bought the place in 1919 on the royalties from more than 1,000,000 reproductions of a single phonograph record, "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny," over the opposition of her husband. She paid down $127,000 on the twenty-room house.

Last Monday contracts were signed for its sale to Jerome C. and Mortimer G. Mayer and Shroder and Koppel at a price of $300,000, she said.

SPORT CHAT

Almost the last of the noblemen horse trainers in Great Britain, Hon. George Lambton, is retiring from his profession with all the blue ribbons of the English turf in his possession. The Hon. George has trained the horses of the Earl of Derby since 1893, and has won the coveted classics—the Derby, the Oaks, the St. Leger and the Eclipse Stakes. The trainer and his noble employer crowned their racing careers in 1924 by winning the Derby with Sansovino after more than thirty years of effort. George Lambton is the fifth son of the late Earl of Durham.

Members of the football teams of two Spokane high schools were promised that the first to make a touchdown in the annual game between the institutions would be rewarded with the "world's largest sandwich." The rooters made good by presenting the fortunate player, Fred Hunter, fullback on the Lewis and Clark team, a sandwich five and a half feet in diameter. It contained 150 pounds of hamburger, a gallon and a half of oysters, 10 dozen eggs and 25 pounds of butter, the last used to fry the meat and spread the "bun." Hunter divided it with other members of the student body assembled in a special convocation to witness the presentation and to celebrate the victory.

Box scores of the American League during the 1925 season contained the names of 264 players. Only six of this number had the distinction of playing in every game during the year. According to statistics 188 players participated in fifteen or more games, while 76 were credited with participation in less than fifteen games. The six players who went through without missing a game were Joe Sewell of the Cleveland Indians; Sam Rice, Washington; Al Simmons, Philadelphia Athletics; Bib Falk, Chicago White Sox; Bob Meusel, New York Yankees, and Marty McManus, St. Louis Browns. The Boston and Detroit clubs were the only ones that failed to have a player participate in all of their games.

Showing such marked superiority that the matches had not a chance of becoming exciting at any stage, the Commercial Grads, famous Edmonton's girls basketball team, easily defeated the Chicago Tri-Chis in a series of two games at Edmonton last week. The final count of the series was 69 for the Grads and 20 for the Tri-Chis. The first game resulted in a score of 35 to 12 and the second 34 to 8. The star players of the series for the Grads were Connie Smith and the Johnson sisters — Dot and Daisy. By winning the series, the Grads retained their title as international girls' basketball champions.
