INDIANS HAD HARD WINTER

Mounted Police Brought Back Word From Barren Islands of Plight of Caribou Eaters

FORT SMITH, N.W.T., March 9.—After a five-day journey into the heart of the wind-swept Barren Lands, a Mounted Police patrol arrived back in Fort Smith with two half-starved Indian women from the camps of the Caribou Eater tribe in the unknown terrain to the east of the Slave River.

The Mounties made the trip to the hunters' teepees, but found that the main body of the starving tribe were much further out than stated in the casual reports of other Indians. Therefore, they were forced to return for more provisions for both men and dogs, bringing the women found in the first camp with them.

Accompanied by two half-breeds, Corporal Blake left again with dog teams loaded with provisions for the Caribou Eaters, on a hike which is expected to last twenty days. The sun is blinding in March and therefore the mushers are equipped with colored glasses to prevent snow blindness.

It is reported here that the caribou herds in migrating further south swung away east of the Caribou Eaters' hunting grounds. Starvation resulted for the Indians. All their dogs were either killed for food or died off, but they hung to their camps, hoping that the caribou might turn their way, or that the "moccasin telegraph" would carry word of their plight to the settlements.

Distracted Wife (at bedside of sick husband)—Is there no hope doctor?

Doctor—I don't know, madam. Tell me first what you are hoping for.

SEASONAL LIST OF NEW BOOKS

Sober Young Men and Gayer Ladies Suggested in Titles of Some Offerings

NEW YORK, Mar. 9.—The sad young men and the gay ladies are ready for their Spring parade. The New York publishing houses have announced their seasonal lists.

The titles suggested a season of sober and disillusioned young men, with the ladies somewhat gayer. F. Scott Fitzgerald's contribution even bears the title "All the Sad Young Men." It is a collection of stories of the younger generation. Meade Minnigerode lightens the pall with "Some American Ladies," all of them wives of presidents; Cora Harries contributes "Flapper Annie" and A. P. Herbert, produces "Laughing Ann and other Poems."

Ring Lardner spans the gap between the somber young men and the bright girls with "The Love Nest and other Stories," concerning some very sorry young men regarded in the gay manner.

Melancholy Men

The melancholy men predominate the list. But, though outnumbered by the serious minds, there is also a jovial troop of American figures of another sort. In its ranks are "The Rise and Fall of Jessie James," by Robert Love; "The Saga of Billy the Kid," by Walter Noble Burns; "Forty Years a Gambler on the Mississippi," by George Devrol, and "Secrets of a Showman," by Charles B. Cochran.

Among the ladies in the parade will be "The Fourth Queen," a romance of the days of Queen Elizabeth, by Isabel Paterson; "Clara Barron," by Harvey O'Higgins; a 'family portrait' called "The Grandmothers," by Glenway Wescott; "The Black Flemings," announced as a romance of a girl whose life was almost—no quite—ruined by a fraud and "Mated," by Wallace Irwin. There is also "The Blind Goddess," by Arthur Train, who writes of lawyers and courts, and whose heroine is a fickle and capricious lady, Justice.

Sinclair Lewis Again

"Soldiers Pay," by William Faulkner, and "Some Found Adventure," by Robert E. McClure, are announced as "ironic" war novels; "Possible Husbands," by Arthur Tuckerman, implies pessimism. "Mantrap," by Sinclair Lewis, is "a satirical burlesque of the 'great open spaces,'"; "Teeftallow" is a story of Tennessee hill-billies by T. S. Stribling. A first novel by William C. Bullitt, "It's Not Done," concerns a rich man who "tried to get all there is out of life, and still keep his honor untarnished."

ADDRESS IN CANADA GIVEN CORNER CLUB

Rev. W. W. Wright Tells of Canada's Needs at Gathering Last Night

Rev. W. W. Wright was the speaker at the Corner Club last evening and took for his subject "Canada and Her Needs." After briefly outlining the early history of the country and its subsequent development which followed Confederation, the speaker maintained that while Canada possessed abundant natural wealth on every side, the people were lacking in a national spirit.

"We have every reason to be proud of this Dominion," said the speaker, "and if a national spirit were fostered among the people of Canada it would give a great impetus to its future development."

Mrs. A. Hunter was the soloist of the evening and her songs were much appreciated. Mrs. R. Walker accompanied at the piano. The serving of refreshments brought a very pleasant event to a close.
