

PATTULLO ON HIS DISTRICT

Tells of Northern B.C.'s Wealth in Recent Vancouver Interview

"Not many people realize the extent and richness of the territory of Central British Columbia. Constantly on the move, and covering only main points on the Grand Trunk division of the Canadian National Railway, and going by boat to Anxox and the Queen Charlotte Islands, it will take me three weeks without going into the vast hinterland north of the Canadian National Railway, which in area comprises one-half of British Columbia," said Hon. T. D. Pattullo, member for this district, in an interview recently published in the Vancouver Province.

"Forty-five miles north of Vanderhoof is Fort St. James, the capital of British Columbia in the days when it was New Caledonia. Fort St. James is situated exactly in the geographical centre of British Columbia, and is on the same isotherm as Cranbrook, which almost borders on the forty-ninth parallel. There are few more picturesque sites in British Columbia than Fort St. James.

"It is gratifying to know that Central and Northern British Columbia are making continuous and steady progress. I have several times made the statement that it is the richest portion of B.C.; but because I represent the constituency of Prince Rupert many people think that this is a prejudiced viewpoint. However, all one needs to do is consider the resources to realize that the statement that it is the richest portion of the province is not far from the truth.

Fish and Minerals

"Prince Rupert is the centre of the largest fish business of the province.

"The mineral wealth of the north is well known and here is situated the famous Premier mine.

"Of timber there is a vast stand, both of first and second grade, especially suitable for pulp and paper purposes by reason of the percentage of spruce.

"As regards agriculture, there is the largest area of high-class mixed farming lands in the province.

"Climatic conditions are exceptionally salubrious. If anyone will follow the public reports of temperature from day to day, he will see that the temperature of Prince Rupert is very similar to that of Victoria and Vancouver; and while it is true that the annual rainfall is heavier there than here, they enjoy a great deal of fine weather. The difference in rainfall in comparison with Vancouver is mainly due to the fact of a heavier fall in a shorter time.

"Central and Northern British Columbia, of which Prince Rupert is the gateway, occupies a strategic position for transpacific commerce, being 500 miles nearer the Orient than any of the southern ports.

Fine People

"The country is fortunate also in the class of people who have gone in to open up its resources. As a matter of fact, given resources to work on, the real asset is the people themselves. The North is very fortunate in this regard. There are no more courageous, energetic and intelligent people on the face of the earth than are in Central and Northern British Columbia. There have been times when the people have felt that they were 'a voice crying in the wilderness,' but they have never faltered, and have continued to forge ahead.

"The South, with its larger population, should extend a sympathetic hand to the North, as occasion may arise. The opening up of the North means millions to the South; every boat is loaded down with freight from Vancouver and Victoria for the northern points. The C.N.R., the C.P.R. and the Union S.S. Co. each run several boats weekly to the north country. The North and South are complementary to each other, and are all one British Columbia. There should be no petty rivalry, port with port. Canada is big enough, and British Columbia is big and resourceful enough to keep all portions of the province in a prosperous and affluent condition."

MACHINE THAT KEEPS SECRETS

Danish Engineer Invents Device For Cipher Writing and Code Transmission.

COPENHAGEN, June 29. — A Danish engineer, P. G. G. Beyer, has invented a machine for cipher writing or code transmission, which makes it possible to write, direct and quickly, dispatches in a cipher which, practically speaking, can be solved only by the person who has the key apparatus in question, which apparatus automatically brings about the solution.

Mr. Beyer, during the war, served in the radio department of the Danish Royal Engineers, and noticed the inadequate working of the cryptogram system used in Denmark and other countries.

The Beyer method, says the "Monitor" is to use two electrically connected typewriters, so that when the typist presses on a key of the one machine, the attached machine writes a letter or sign, which depends upon the position of part of the electric equipment and a guiding wheel. The cryptogram which the attached sending machine has written, is telegraphed to the receiver, who decipheres it through his machine, which is arranged like the sending one. By reversing a switch, the electric connection between the two machines is also reversed, so that the message is written exactly as typed on the sender's first typewriter.

The machines have 43 keys, and the number of codes can be multiplied indefinitely.

The more general the use of wireless transmission, with its frequent publicity, the more the new invention will be needed. The Copenhagen Engineering College, the general staff, and the Industrial Council have all rendered assistance and encouragement to the inventor of this machine.

A Pimply Face Is Unsightly

Miss C. C. M. Smart, South Battleford, Sask., writes:—"A while ago I was troubled with facial blemishes, especially pimples, and was really ashamed to go out with such a bad looking face.

I tried 2 or 3 different remedies, but they didn't help me any, so one day a friend, who had been troubled the same as I was, advised me to use

High School — J. Currie; J. MacKay and R. Mortimer; P. Bond, P. Baisler and D. Stalker; M. Sakamoto, Y. Katsuyama, W. Murray, Bob Matheson and E. Katsuyama; reserve, N. Kinlor.

Naval Reserves:—R. Moore; J. Fitzgerald and G. Shenton; J. McAulay, J. Sim, Ned Byrne; H. Macdonald, Bob Peacock, G. Dyer, E. Allistone and T. Camm.

The next regular Intermediate game will be tomorrow night between the High School and the Y-Macs.

Canadian cities expended approximately one-third of a million dollars for community recreation last year. Starting as children's movement, public recreation in the Dominion has expanded to include citizens of all ages. Among the facilities for adults reported are 65 community recreation centres, 149 tennis courts and ten swimming pools. Nine cities provide municipal golf; Calgary and Lethbridge, Alberta, Vancouver, B.C., Winnipeg, Man., and Hamilton, London, Stratford, Toronto and Windsor, Ont. Organized winter sports were reported by eight cities, community music and drama each by seven. Leadership for Canada's public play areas was given last year by 308 men and 277 women recreation directors, twenty-nine of whom were employed the year round. In four cities classes for training recreation leaders were conducted and had a total registration of 93. Bond issues for recreation purposes were voted during 1925 in Vancouver and Hamilton and totalled $75,000.

League athletics are flourishing under municipal auspices. Playground ball leads, 68 leagues being reported for last year by nine cities. This game is similar to baseball but is played with a large, soft ball. Eighteen hard baseball leagues are reported by ten cities. Other leagues are as follows: Basketball, 15; volleyball, 10; soccer, 7; hockey 7; football, 5; and cricket, 2. Rowing and quoits are also popular sports. In Toronto ten league sports were enjoyed by 15,159 players during the 1925 season. Montreal reported 127 skating places. This city operated eleven playgrounds with an attendance of 367,737 for the year, an increase of 102,650 over 1924.

The Oriental Trading Company, a local Japanese concern, again appeared in the city police court this morning, before Magistrate McClymont, on a charge of keeping liquor for sale. The case was remanded for another eight days.

TERMINALS WIN FOOTBALL GAME

Defeated Cold Storage by 2 to 1 in Second Match of City Championship Series

In a game that was featured more with excitement than quality of play, the Grand Terminals last evening defeated the Cold Storage by 2 to 1 in the second match of the Mofley Cup of city championship series. There was a good deal of looseness and both sides missed a number of scoring chances. Play, on the whole, was about even and a good sized crowd witnessed the match.

There was only one goal in the first half, Jimmy Farquhar having scored for the Terminals. The Cold Storage equalized through H. Corbett in the second half and the winning goal for the Terminals was made by Dick Howe towards the end of the game.

G. Krause was referee, A. Harvey and G. Mitchell linesmen and the teams took the field as follows:

Cold Storage.—A. Murray; A. Haig and G. Kelsey; J. Carlson, J. Harris and A. Macdonald; T.
