DEATH OF DR.

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER TELLS OF PASSING OF WIDELY KNOWN ARCHEOLOGIST, BROTHER OF TERRACE MAN

Accompanied by a photo of deceased, the Philadelphia Inquirer of recent date, under a two-column head on its front page, gave the following account of the death of Dr. George B. Gordon, brother of J. K. Gordon of Terrace:

Dr. George Byron Gordon, director of the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania and one of the most widely known archeologists in the world, died in the Jefferson Hospital yesterday morning from injuries sustained on Saturday evening when he fell down a few steps in the Racquet Club, Sixteenth Street, below Walnut and crushed his He was a native of Prince Edward Island, Canada, and was in his fifty-seventh year.

The eminent archeologist had attended a dinner of the Wilderness Club in the club dining room, in company with Daniel Moreau Barringer, 2105 Walnut Street, and his son, Brandon Barringer, The club was addressed by Theodore Roosevelt Jr., and his brother, Kermit, who described their recent game hunt on the highlands of Thibet.

FELL BACKWARD Following the dinner, Dr. Gordon and his two companions went to secure their coats. There was some confusion as to whether they had been left on the first or the second floor, and the younger Barringer, followed by Dr. Gordon, ascended the stairs.

prehensive plan of expansion of the Museum, of which the Eckley B. Coxe. Jr., Memorial Pavilion of Egyptology is the latest addition.

In making his annual report to the trustees of the Museum in December. 1925, Dr. Gordon declared that plans for the fourth addition to the Museum group were rapidly nearing completion in the hands of the architects. According to the present conception of that building, it will be erected to the eastward of the present structure, and will form the central unit of the Museum. It will house the administration offices, in addition to galleries, laboratories and store rooms.

Dr. Josiah H. Penniman, provost of the university, made the following statement yesterday, upon - learning of Dr. Gordon's death:

"Dr. Gordon was an explorer, anthropologist, archaeologist, author and teacher, for some years a member of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, and more recently the Director of the University of Pennsylvania Mu-

MIGRATION OF BIRDS IS UNSOLVED RIDDLE

Larger Ones Fly by Day While Smaller Wing Their Way by Night

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 8 .- The annual migrations of birds remain unsolved by scientists who have been studying these meanderings for 200

The basic reasons for the movements and the cause of the varying lengths of the journeys have never been definitely ascertained, Dr. Alexander Wedmore, president of the American Ornithologists Union, said recently. He has just completed an extensive study of bird migrations from many vantage points in the western hemisphere. Large birds, such as cranes, ducks. geese, loons and hawks, fly by day, Dr. Wetmore said, while smaller birds like warblers and sparrows, fly by night. The smaller birds have to obtain their food during the day, while fasting for a day is no hardship for the larger onec. The birds fly at an average altitude of 3,000 feet although some attain an altitude of 29,000 feet. Small birds, he said, fly at from 20 to 37 miles an hour, the large from 42 to 59 miles.
