IN NERVOUS DISORDERS—Free The Nerves

In cases of nervous disorders it is but logical that all effort should be directed to secure a proper co-ordination of the nervous system. If you know of the science of Chiropractic you will unhesitatingly add that Chiropractic best achieves this result.

For the science of Chiropractic deals directly with the nervous system. The Chiropractor knows that most disease is due to pressure upon nerves by spinal bones, and he removes this pressure by Chiropractic spinal adjustments.

In the case of nervous disorders adjustments go directly to the source of the trouble, and it is a rare case of this type indeed which cannot be benefited by adjustments.

HEALTH FOLLOWS CHIROPRACTIC CORRECTS PRESSURE ON SPINAL NERVES IN DISEASES OF THE FOLLOWING ORGANS: HEAD, EYES, EARS, NOSE, THROAT, ARMS, HEART, LUNGS, LIVER, STOMACH, PANCREAS, SPLEEN, KIDNEYS, BOWELS, APPENDIX, BLADDER, LOWER LIMBS. THE LOWER NERVE UNDER THE MAGNIFYING GLASS IS PINCHED BY A MISALIGNED JOINT. PINCHED NERVES CANNOT TRANSMIT HEALTHFUL IMPULSES. CHIROPRACTIC ADJUSTING REMOVES THE PRESSURE. THE UPPER NERVE IS FREE AS NATURE INTENDS.

NATIVES RETAIN BURIAL CUSTOM

ALERT BAY OBSEQUIES RECENTLY RETAINED MANY ABORIGINAL FEATURES

(By C.P.) While the Indian aborigines of British Columbia have, in many instances, adopted the manners and customs of the white men, their burial ceremonies in some of the reservations still retain many of the features of other days. Alert Bay, one of the few coast Indian settlements that has been little disturbed by the advance of civilization, witnessed recently the funeral of a prominent Indian woman which bore the trappings of savage pomp and splendor.

The funeral was held to the accompaniment of the moans of paid mourners and the grave covered by a canopy of white cotton cloth. Below this was a large plate of glass set on a frame which covered a beautiful display of flowers. These were spread over an ancient ceremonial robe, embroidered with pearl buttons and elk's teeth. All the most prized possessions of the dead woman were spread on the ground in the vicinity of the grave. Clothes and boots were ranged in orderly fashion near the head of the grave, while a trunk on which was set a small photograph, covered by a scalloped cloth, was placed at the foot of it. On dishes placed nearby was food for the use of the departed spirit in the happy hunting ground.

The Alert Bay Indians have their mission house and nearly all of them have embraced a nominal Christianity, yet in their burial customs they appear to have clung to their ancient pagan ritual.

GAS POWER IS AID IN LOGGING

NEW MOTIVE METHOD REVOLUTIONIZING INDUSTRY IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 9.—The logging industry of British Columbia is being revolutionized by gas motive power which is rapidly replacing the logging engine and horse.

On the Pacific Coast, in the days before the gas engine, little hauling was done by truck. There were several reasons. Trucks, in order to hold the mighty tree trunks, had to be of such solid construction that even when empty one of them was a pretty good load for a team of horses. Good hauling roads were scarce, and, as it took more than one team to haul a log load, truck loading was costly. It was a good deal easier and less expensive to build skid roads, grease them well and drag logs along them in "turns" that is, a dozen or so coupled end to end in a single line.

East of the Cascade mountains and in the pine country generally wagon and truck played a greater part in the transportation problem of the woods. This was owing to the trees being smaller, the logs being shorter and weighing less. But even there most of the hauling was done in winter by sled when snow covered the ground.

When gas trucks appeared, experiments were made with a view to fitting them into the log haul problem, both over paved and unpaved roads. The result has been a type of truck especially suited to this kind of work. Now truck logging is a recognized and extensive branch of the logging industry. By the help of gas logging trucks operators of small means have been able to log off isolated patches of timber owned by farmers or other private individuals that otherwise would not have been considered as lumber factors, and find a profitable market for the timber.

Logging authorities believe that in future gas trucks will do much of the logging that is now done by locomotives. As lands are to be logged grow more rugged and precipitous through the march of the logging camps towards the mountains in search of stumps, railroad building grows more expensive and difficult. The temptation will always be to use the rough roads and motor trucks rather than build railroads and operate costly locomotives.
