WAPITI ARE COMING BACK

ANIMALS, WHICH WERE THREATENED WITH EXTINCTION, ARE ABUNDANT AGAIN

VANCOUVER, March 4.—Threatened with complete extinction less than twenty-five years ago, the Kootenay wapiti or elk, under the practical protection of the British Columbia game laws, has "come back" and multiplied so rapidly in late years that they are now numbered in herds of thousands, according to J. E. French, big game hunter and guide who accompanied an expedition of the Field Museum of Chicago into the haunts of the wapiti recently.

"No more remarkable example of the excellent results of careful big game conservation exists today in Canada than the large numbers of Kootenay wapiti," Mr. French stated and further expressed the opinion that it would be safe to allow hunting under a very limited bag for an indefinite period at least.

Probably most people will recognize this nobility of all the deer family by the well-known name of elk. In times gone by, its range was as extensive as that of the buffalo. About the only difference between these two hardy quadrupeds was that the elk ranged further west and not so far north as the bison. Of the many millions that formerly existed in the western part of Canada and Northern United States there is but a shadow of their former numbers left and their range is very limited. In British Columbia there are two main herds, not counting some few scattered here and there and one that was introduced in the Lillooet district. One, the smaller of these two herds, is located in a densely-wooded section of Vancouver Island. The other, much the larger herd, is in the high park country and semi-dry belt of the Rockies of East Kootenay. These Kootenay ani-

Nerves on Edge

When the nerves go wrong everything is wrong.

The whole human body including each and every organ is dependent on the nervous system for energy and direction.

When nerve force becomes exhausted the organs fail in their functions and the result is discomfort and pain.

Headache, neuritis, sciatica, rheumatism are often developed. But there is also restlessness, nervousness, irritability, sleeplessness and depression and discouragement.

To regain health and vigor the nervous system must be restored by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

The use of narcotics and opiates only relieve pain at terrible expense to the nervous system. Lasting relief can only come by feeding the nerves. Your system has failed to do this and it is therefore necessary to employ Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to bring the nervous system back to normal.

males average larger and finer than those of the coast and compare very favorably with the best of the United States herd in Yellowstone Park. They have the distinction of being the only wapiti in Canada for which an open season exists.
