RAILWAY COMPANY AND ASSESSMENT.

To all appearances, the municipal court of revision has arrived at an equitable solution of the railway company's assessment. Of course, there are a great many factors involved in the matter that require specialized knowledge and it is a difficult matter for a lay- That is via the Peace Pass. The Pine man to comment on the question although from the ordinary point of view the decisions reached appear to be satisfactory. The city authorities have, however, taken a commendable stand that the railway company should bear its burden of taxation along with the other taxpayers. Concessions have been given the company with respect to taxation ever since the city was incorporated on strength of certain undertakings being promised by the company in the minimum construction for assumed return. Very few, if any, of these promises have been effected so it would seem proper now for the city, as it has done, to discontinue the concessions and deal with the railway company on its merits, just as it does with other taxpayers.

IS ANGER DUE TO ILLNESS.

Why are so-called rational human beings so easily angered? A is approximately 175 miles from, and scientist is working on the theory that every fit of anger and every nearly due west of Spirit River, and apbad disposition can be traced back to some illness. He is convinced that people who have disease histories are more quick to anger than those who have never been sick.

Now that he has called it to the public attention it will be observed by many that there is a certain resemblance between the sick and the irascible. For one thing, both anger and fever make one red in the face. And then, are not the ill always irritable, splenetic and petulant?

If this theory holds true, it would appear that the past has witnessed an appalling amount of sickness. Many times during the course of the day the average person "loses his temper" or sees others lose control of themselves. A toe is stepped on, a train or street car is late, the car won't start, the dinner burns, a cake "falls"; and then, somebody's tongue slips, there are hasty words, and a few minutes later regret and a resolve to practice self-re-

This anger-after-illness theory may be productive of some good, and it may be dangerous. True, society would be more tolerant of the ungovernable temper if convinced it came invariably from sickness, but it might have the undesirable effect of discouraging R. W. Clayton. honest attempts at self mastery.

However, it is not safe at this stage of the investigation to presume too far on one's privilege of getting "mad" because of illness. There is a certain hazard in resenting too strongly and overtly a fancied wrong or an unintentional tramp on the toe, even though that which appears to be the provocation for the resentment is not the real cause.

ROUTES REFERRED TO AT OTTAWA -MONKMAN PASS AND PRINCE RUPERT FAVORED

"I am not going to argue for any specific route, but I say to the minister of railways (Mr. Dunning) that in my opinion he could very well examine more closely the Monkman Pass and the Pine Pass routes," said D. M. Kennedy. member for Peace River, in the course of the debate on a Pacific Coast outlet for the Peace River country in the House of Commons at Ottawa. "The survey today is merely a temporary one. and I think the mileage obtainable both to Peace River and to Prince Rupert justifies that survey. It means a difference, from one or two of the main points in Peace River, of 400 miles to Prince Rupert as compared with the present route."

MINISTER OF RAILWAYS

"For the route via Sturgeon Lake and Obed, new construction of 204 miles would be required for the assumed minimum traffice," said Hon. C, A. Dunning, minister of railways. "The capital investment would be $13,336,000, or to Prince Rupert $13,356,000.

"For the route via Monkman pass, the new construction required, assuming the line goes to Prince Rupert, would be 188 miles for the assumed minimum traffic. Assuming the line goes to Vancouver, the construction required would be 198 miles, and assuming it goes via the Pacific and Great Eastern, which is British Columbia's railway, 310 miles of new construction would be required.

"The capital investment on the Monkman Pass route, taking Prince Rupert as the destination, the shortest route. would be $16,092,000. The capital instment on the Peace Pass route would be $21,472,000.

VIA C.N.R. "New construction via the Canadian National to Prince Rupert would require 502 miles. New construction via Canadian National to Vancouver would require 512 miles, new construction via Pacific and Great Eastern to Vancouver 542 miles, and new construction via the Fraser River to Vancouver 850 miles. Pass is dismissed in favor of the Monk-man route by the engineers. "Then another interesting alternative is the route to Stewart on the Portland Canal. Instead of going to either Prince Rupert to Vancouver, the possibility of going to Stewart on the Portland Canal. via the Findlay Forks is dealt with, and initial traffic in that case would be 611 miles, and the capital invested $30,370,- ver. 000, or including the connecting line to Prince George, $37,750,000. "According to the engineers, the Monkman route is so much superior, and so nearby, that it was not necessary to go into detail in the report on the Pine Pass route.

on the south side of the river before the ground becomes low enough between it and the Pine River to allow a feasible line south to the Pine River Valley. The recently discovered Monkman Pass is in turn more advantageous than the Pine Pass for this traffic on account of its lesser gradients and distance. When food must satisfy and "stand by" you

Most people have to do more than two-thirds of their most important work in the forenoon. To supply this energy, they need a breakfast that satisfies and will "stand by" them throughout the morning.

That is why health authorities urge good breakfasts-why the matchless flavour of Quaker Oats makes it the breakfast of millions of people. Its delicious taste awakens lazy appetites and thus promotes easy digestion. Its bulk and tender bran assist in the assimilation of other food and aid in one of nature's most important functions.

Quaker Oats is the most perfect of all cereal foods. It supplies the elements which build tissue and give energy, as well as the important vitamines and mineral salts. It contains 16% protein and 65% carbohydrates.

For better mornings, have Quaker Oats for breakfast. No other is "just as good", for no other has 50 years' experience in grain selection and milling behind it. See that the picture of the friendly Quaker is on the package.

VILNA, Feb. 24 .-- A fire which started the long dry grass of Lyon's Flat, one mile south of here, early last summer, is still burning. For the last few weeks a blue flame has been observed issuing from a spot where the fire has burned deeply into the peaty soil. Many local people think that this flame probably issues from a pocket of natural gas, and the owner intends to investigate the possibilities of a gas field when the snow has gone.
