"CANADIAN FARMER AND CANADIAN LAW" TITLE OF ARTICLE BY INSPECTOR PARSONS

Probably there is no civilian calling knewledge of law is more to those engaged in the business of farming writes Inspector T. W. S. Parsons in the British Columbia Service Bulletin. No man is intimately touched by legislation has not desired a little information or an immediate remedy in the matter of annoyance caused by beast, damage to property, trespass, theft, or on some other equally important subject? Perhaps a crisis! occurs, one's attorney lives miles away. the law must be taken into one's own hands, yet something-and the right thing-must be done at once. What?

Under the by no mean unusual circumstances outlined possibly prelimininformation and advice may be reasonably offered by one who for many years has served in a Canadian Provincial Police Force and who, from listening to scores of ill-founded complaints, feels that a knowledge of legal principles-however elementary - would tend to prevent many common misunderstandings. They are wise men who consider that an appeal to the courts usually learn by bitter experience, toria. Another and more regrettable feature is that quite often the outcome of try production has grown in value from some trivial prosecution, which might $35,528,000 in 1916 to $84,802,000 in easily have been avoided in the first has ultimately engendered hatred which only bloodshed would ap-

Although time, mutual forbearance, and common sense effectually smooths over many a complication, there will always remain bona fide causes for complaint, causes requiring an acquaintanceship with law to effect their speedy, satisfactory, and inexpensive settlement. Believing, then, that the Public Service Bulletin is a singularly in 1926 were strikingly in excess of the happy medium through which to acquaint the British Columbian farmer with his country's laws, this series of articles is intended to serve as a brief various Federal statutes. Conciseness with clarity will be attempted, and benecessary essentials will be presented. B. N. A. ACT

SCOPE OF PROVINCIAL LAWS On their part the various provinces, either then brought into existence or formed later, were given the privilege of exercising powers necessary for their internal requirements; that is to say, within their boundaries they might legislate upon education, local taxation, company incorporations, the solemnization of marriage, the administration of criminal and civil justice, and all other matters of a purely domestic nature.

Of peculiar interest to farmers was the mutual agreement with respect to their chosen calling. The Act declared that both · federal and provincial governments might pass laws in connection with agriculture, and that both have done so goes without saying. The Canadian farmer in consequence is surrounded with a rather bewildering array of legislation specifically designed for his protection much of which, and perhaps, fortunately, he will never even hear about. This may be regarded as especially so when it is remembered that between 1867 and the present day the federal and nine provincial governments have passed laws and amending laws sufficient to fill many a large volume!

THE KING'S PRINTERS However, as it is with some of the provincial Acts that farmers are mostly concerned, a general idea of their purport will be given later, but with this recommendation, when information beyoud the scope of these articles is desired, the full text of whatever statute deals with the subject should be procured from the printing department of your provincial government. These printing bureaux, both federal and provincial, are in charge of an official known as the King's Printer, one of whose duties is to print and supply copies of parliamentary Acts for a purely nominal fee.

GREATEST SPORTING RACE IN BRI-TAIN IS AS POPULAR AS EVER

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 23. - (Canadian Press Despatch) .- Publication of the "weights" has quickened public interest in the Grand National steeplechase and the Lincolnshire, which are to be run near the end of next month. The great steeplechase will not seem quite the same this year, decause of the death of Old Tay Bridge, veteran 'chaser, who has had a long and notable career in the National. He never won the race, but was second in 1925 and 1926, and had been allotted top weight of 175 pounds for this year's National. Jack Horner, winner of the as ever I did when I was a young girl." race last year, is 10th in the table of weights with 162 pounds.

In the Lincolnshire, first of spring flat race handicaps, King . Clubs, winner last year, is handicapped only 98 pounds, being about 40th in the table.

Entries for the Grand National, to be run over the famous Aintree course at Liverpool on Friday, March 25, four miles and 856 yards, number about 70 and there are about 60 entries for the Lincolnshire, a straight mile, run a Lincoln on the preceding Wednesday.

The Grand National is probably th greatest purely sporting event left in racing. Unlike the other outstanding races of the year, betting on the National is not large, but for the very good reason that a four-mile course with numerous and dangerous jump plays havoc with any field that starts. A good horse can fall as badly as poor horse, while a poor horse in falling can bring down the horses behind him, be they the best of jumpers.
