Partner Jumps Heart Bid To Five, Shocks Mr. Meek

Mr. Meek thought seriously about passing his partner's opening bid in today's deal. But with an ace and two jacks, which was plenty for a one over one response, he finally decided to bid one heart. He almost fell off his chair when Mrs. Brash promptly raised him to five hearts. This completely unscientific bid really put Mr. Meek on the spot. He had a sure diamond loser and (apparently) two spade losers. But he made his contract anyway, on the following line of play.

The opening lead was the king of diamonds and he won with H-5 4 the ace in dummy. He cashed D-K Q 10 9 the ace and king of clubs and ruffed a third round of clubs in his hand. He entered dummy with a small heart to the king and led the last club and ruffed Next he laid down the ace and Mrs. Keen was in the lead. If she returned a diamond at this point, Mr. Meek could have ruffed in his hand while discarding a small spade from the board. Then the dummy would have been good with the exception of one spade loser.

But Mrs. Keen led back spade. She gave long thought to the question of whether to lead the 10 or a small one. Actually, | Complete, Reliable and Effiit made no difference but her final choice was the 10. Mr. Meek covered with the jack in dummy and Mr. Abel played welding supplies, the queen. Mr. Abel was now helpless to make an effective return. If he led a diamond, Mr Meek would have a sluff and ruff, as before. He therefore returned a small spade, hoping Mrs. Keen had the nine. But Mr. Meek won the trick with that card and it was all over.

"I'll never do it again," said Mr. Meek, nervously, "Next time .13 all have only an ace and two. .121/2 jacks, and you open the bid-1 ding, I'll just pass."

"But Homer," said Miss Brash, "you needed so very little more to make a slam." (Mr. Meek shuddered). "And anyway you had more than an ace and two jacks. You had the nine of,

Miss Brash was right. The nine of spades was the key card.
