CURIOS PHENOMENA

In a story published in Saturday's "Daily News" an instance was given of where a man coming down the Tahtsa River was induced in some unknown manner to change the usual course and to take a much more hazardous one with the result that he picked up a man who had been stranded there and who, in the ordinary course of events, would have been missed. The man who heard the motorboat coming and who feared that he would not be discovered was earnestly wishing that the boat would come his way. It would seem as if the man in the boat was influenced by that wish and changed his course accordingly.

This is a common occurrence. Again and again they are being recorded. Men are influenced by the minds of other men. An earnest desire often results in the desire being fulfilled.

It is always difficult to say where the influence ends. Sometimes there is a stronger influence at work or there are distractions that prevent the mind message from reaching its objective. In that case the mind influence may cease or be very faint. What seems sure is that one mind often is influenced by another mind and that very often the union of minds operating in a given direction has a wonderful influence in the world.

Once upon a time there was a man washed the dishes and swept the floor every day while his wife was away for her holidays. It was a fairy tale.

A pessimist is a man who, of two evils, chooses both.

STAMPEDING THE CROWD

Human beings in the mass may be stampeded just as cattle start to run in a given direction and nothing will stop them. It is the influence of mind on mind. We see it in the lynchings in the south, in political gatherings, in revival meetings. Sometimes a whole district may be seized with religious mania and only the very strongest minds are able to withstand its power. During the war, patriotic fervor obsessed the whole country and it required a much braver man to withstand it than to go and fight. Sometimes in gatherings where feeling is very strong in a given direction, the very air seems electrified and a tenseness pervades the place which is felt only on such occasions. The power of mind is greater than most of us imagine and we are only now beginning to realize it.

There are successful people and those with swelled heads.

It's not the way the wind blows, but the way you set your sails.

SEEING THINGS

Burroughs in one of his essays in "Eyes and No Eyes," relates that on one occasion he was desirous of finding a sample of an unusual type of frog but felt sure that no such specimen was to be found in the neighborhood. However, he looked for it and found not only one but many of them. Indeed, from that time he never walked through the bush without seeing many of the animals. He explains the matter simply and logically by stating that the specimens were there all the time but that, as he had no expectation or desire to see them, his eye did not recognize them.

The moral (hateful word) is that we see what we want to see. What do we want to see in our daily work, in our friends, in our neighbors, in our city? We can cultivate the faculty of seeing the bright things, the things that will make our own lives and the lives of those around us bright. We see the rain, the clouds, the dismal. Suppose we take more note of the things that are bright. We have no tornadoes, no cyclones, no earthquakes, no floods. We have friends who are worth having, a chance to work, a chance to play, a chance to enjoy life. Let's look for joy. We shall soon be so accustomed to finding it that it will be with us all the time, and life will be all the more enjoyable because we shall have so got into the habit of seeing the bright spots that we shall have no time to notice the dreary, undesirable items.

DR. DOBSON AT UNITED CHURCH

Social Service Secretary Preaches to Large Congregation

Two large congregations at the United Church yesterday heard splendid addresses from Dr. Dobson, associate secretary of Social Service for the Church in Canada. On the platform along with Dr. Dobson in the morning were Rev. E. C. Scott, of the Thomas Crosby, and Mr. Linzey representing the Baptist Church.

Taking as his subject "This Young Nation and its Primary Needs," Dr. Dobson said one of its needs was the application of the principles of Christ to its daily life. He pointed out that to an unusual and indeed unique degree this nation was the product of growth, not the adding together of different units but the result of drawing together of material by its growing needs. In no case was its growth the result of annexation. Discussing the statement that the United States was the great example of the flood tide of immigration, Dr. Dobson made the considered statement that in proportion to the number of people here to assimilate new-comers Canada had four times the volume of immigrants that the States ever had.

One great factor was the happy faculty of blending different nationalities together. To the French he gave great credit, affirming that at the critical period her loyalty and outspoken allegiance to Britain saved Canada for Britain. History supplied no other example where two great nations of different cultures and racial instincts had grown together as the French and British in this Canada.

BINDING FORCES

The great fortune in having leaders with the happy faculty of blending the people together was an important factor. One of her needs is that the binding forces may be strengthened. Religiously Canada has made greater strides towards co-operation than any other country. In the great Wheat Pool of the prairies she leads the world in economic and business co-operation and this is the result of a spiritual co-operation in the first place. Just as drifting soils is one of the problems of the prairie farmer and the need for fibre to bind the elements together is resulting in successful experiments, so Canada needs a binding fibre, and this can be supplied only from the Christian hearts and by the following out of Christ's teaching. A deeper truer family loyalty is admittedly essential, not only in Canada but the world over. The loosening of family ties is an international problem. A great nation depends on the sanctity of the family.

Liberating force, that is not individual liberty, but the liberation of the soul from the ties that bind it is a great need said the speaker. Education, culture, the result of the discipline of the individual, gives national liberty. Liberation of the individual from the ties of evil habits is necessary to the growth of the nation. The drug, the liquor, the national weaknesses. The strong are not to please themselves but must exercise restraint for their weaker brothers and such leagues as the Moderation League are a challenge and a danger to national advancement. The greatest liberating force is love to God and love to man.

Special musical numbers were "The Reformation," solo by Archie Scott and duet by Rev. R. C. Scott and Archie Scott. Miss Way was organist and accompanist.

EVENING SERVICE

In the evening Dr. Dobson spoke on "The Gospel of Jesus in the Modern World." He mentioned rapidity of change as a feature of the present period. This resulted in a tendency to fear among men and this tends to the formation of social groups. History records that where this has been the case the cry goes up that the world is lost. This is a pessimistic period. As in the Assyrian Empire there is a chaotic state and a lawlessness that strikes terror to hearts. Fatalism is general. A common sign is the feeling of "What's the Use?" Indifference is one of the greatest sins and the speaker challenged the congregation that the indifference to vice in Prince Rupert was one of its greatest problems. The penalty is sure and terrible.

The answer to this was the sense of the Gospel and essence of Christ's evangel. "God is with you." With this as the national spirit Dr. Dobson claimed that the Canadian nation would give freedom to the world.

Archie Scott rendered solos "If with all your heart," from the "Elijah," and the "Penitent." Miss Way accompanying.

Rev. T. Rinde was on the platform with Dr. Dobson.

TWO ORGANIZATIONS ARE DISAPPOINTED

Yacht Club and Moose Both Postpone Events Until Later Date

The weather man was very unkind to the Yacht Club and Moose Order when his contributions were so plentiful and incessant that both organizations had to postpone their celebrations. Members of the Yacht Club who had gone to so much trouble to decorate their boats are to be sympathized with. It is to be hoped that they will not be discouraged but that when the regatta is pulled off they will be on hand in full force and undismayed by their disappointment of yesterday.

CONSERVATION OF HALIBUT IS TALKED ABOUT

Vancouver Newspaper Discusses Subject in Editorial Article Following Report

Following the issue of the report of J. P. Babcock, which is based on the investigations of Professor Thompson there has been much discussion of the possibility of halibut conservation. Here is what the Vancouver Province has to say on the subject:

It will not be an unusual or surprising thing if John P. Babcock, commissioner of fisheries and chairman of the international halibut commission, is told that he is unduly pessimistic in reporting a serious depletion of halibut in British Columbia coastal waters. People who try to do anything for the conservation of our natural resources—even if it is only to protest against the waste of them—soon discover that their avocation is exceedingly unpopular in certain quarters, official and unofficial. Hon. Minister of Lands and Parks, for instance, is very certain that those people are stubbornly and willfully wrong who say that our forests are going too fast. Mr. Babcock himself—although he, it is true, has been supported by his own minister, Mr. Sloan—has had to wage a twenty-year battle for the preservation of the sockeye salmon of the Fraser, and the issue is still to be decided. The attitude of the let-us-alone party is the old one of "what has posterity ever done for us?" And there are a great many honest and responsible citizens and business men who honestly believe that in matters of business and economics, sufficient for the day is the evil thereof; and that if British Columbia is ever to be developed and made the prosperous home of a larger population, there must not be too much care and anxiety for the problems of the day after tomorrow.

MANY INTERESTED

But while all this is very true, there will still be those who will pay serious attention to what Mr. Babcock has to say about the process which is going on on the halibut banks. The fishery interests, on both sides of the international border, are really concerned in this case. When Mr. Babcock says his commission has discovered that the average halibut catch per unit of fishing gear in Hecate Straits has dropped from 450 pounds in 1906 to 47 pounds in 1926, the people who depend upon the catching of halibut for their livelihood ought to sit up and take notice. A decrease of 90 per cent in twenty years seems as if it must properly be described as depletion; and it might even be said that depletion on that scale and at that rate would soon end in extinction.

WOULD REORGANIZE

What is the trouble, and what can be done about it? Mr. Babcock's commission is going to meet all the interested persons this year, and later frame a report to the governments of Canada and the United States. Mr. Babcock himself hints that the only practical remedy—as in the case of the Fraser River sockeye fishery—is the closing of some of the halibut banks. As far as the two governments are concerned, there will have to be an agreement between them as to policy and common action, and there are good prospects of it. But without speaking dogmatically on a very complicated matter, we are inclined to think that what is most needed is a thorough reorganization of the whole fishing industry of the North Pacific Coast. A great trade has been built up in salmon and halibut. Meanwhile, such valuable food fishes as our excellent herring and pilchard are used for fertilizer. Vast quantities of smaller flat fish than the halibut are taken in the nets of our fishing industry and thrown overboard again, dead and wasted. If some way could be found to profitably market all the fish that can be taken in our coastal waters, there would be no need and incentive to overfish the salmon streams and the halibut banks.

FLYING U.S. FLAG

Editor Daily News,
 Will you please let me know through your paper if it is right for one of our leading hotels flying the American flag, Stars and Stripes, at the top of the flag pole and the Canadian flag lower down. This occurred all day Saturday, July 9 and was still flying at 8:30 p.m. same night and was remarked by scores of people. As a returned soldier and a Canadian you will be doing justice by publishing this letter. Thanking you for same.

Ten Years Ago in Prince Rupert

JULY 11, 1917.

The Prince Rupert Cadet Corps in camp at Terrace is enjoying the weather, the drill, all kinds of stunts—and the strawberries.

The fish car situation is still having its effects on the fish receipts. The uncertainty as to cars results, for the time being, in the boats going elsewhere.

The sum of $35.50 was realized by the raffle of a leather pillow donated by Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Leroux. J. Judge was the winner of the raffle.

J. N. Sinclair, connected with the Still Fisheries in Prince Rupert for some time, will leave shortly for the west coast of Graham Island to take charge of the company's operations there.

Letters from Spitzer, Rorick & Co., Toledo, Ohio, and Wood, Gundy & Co., Saskatoon, expressed satisfaction at the city's financial standing.
