Chief Skugaid's Find May be Rich One-Yachting Season is Open—Halibut Landings Still Gaining

The local halibut schooner Chief Skugaid spent three months on the grounds and got 61,000 pounds which is not good fishing, but if what Capt. Bill Parsons and his men, who returned to port last Saturday, say is correct the vessel may have struck it rich just the same. Off Cape Fairweather, the boat reports, she picked up 150 pounds of what is believed to be this precious waxy-like excretion of the whale known as ambergis, which is so highly prized in the making of perfumery. It is not usual to find this commodity in northern waters, as it is usually picked up from the tropical seas, but it was brought in and a specimen has
