MINISTER OF LANDS WOULD HAVE 300,000 NEW SETTLERS OF RIGHT KIND BROUGHT INTO CANADA YEARLY

and the huge sums of money invested therein by the National Government evidence this fact. Continuing, the minister said in part:

Canada stands today in respect of Foreign Trade, as the fifth nation in the world, and with a country of such huge area and sparse population, it is essential that this trade must be maintained. More and more the various nations of the world are endeavoring to become self-sustaining. They desire to produce as many of the necessities of sustenance as possible within their own confines, and their aim is to export to other countries the surplus of their production. There are some countries of the world that are over-populated in relation to the extent and variety of their natural resources. This is pre-eminently not the case with respect to Canada. What we need in Canada is more population. With more population, it is quite obvious that there will be a larger home market. Given natural resources for human use, the real asset to the country is the Human himself. We are in the fortunate position, in Canada, of having the experience of other countries to guide us in the building up of ours. Notably we have the example of the United States, where standards of living and general conditions are similar to our own, and we should not fail to profit thereby.

Several years ago, when opinion generally was decidedly opposed to a vigorous immigration policy, I took it upon myself to advocate that a vigorous immigration policy should at once be inaugurated. The opposition to this viewpoint said, "What is the good of bringing people into the country unless the people who are already here are profitably occupied."

POPULATION IS SURE

It seems perfectly clear to me that unless you have people coming into the country, and I am speaking of Canada now, not China, you will have people going out. It is people that create opportunity. What is it that lures a number of our young men to the United States? It is the opportunity to secure bigger prizes than can be secured in Canada, and when I say this, it does not mean that one will necessarily be better off in the United States than he will be in Canada. If you wish to make a hundred million dollars, you might make it in New York, London, Paris, or other large centres of population, but you are not likely to make it in Prince Rupert. It does not follow, however, that you would be happier in New York than you are in Prince Rupert. Personally, I believe that the average citizen on this side of the line is better off than he is on the other side of the line, but the fact of the matter is, that by getting more people into the country you will create new opportunity in every line of endeavor.

There is more opportunity in British Columbia today with its six hundred thousand people, than there was when it only had three hundred thousand and there is more unemployment than there was then. There is as a matter of fact less.

The periods of greatest expansion in the United States, the most rapid increase in wages and the greatest shortening of hours of work was the period when immigration was the heaviest.

NOT FAVOR DUMPING

I am not at all in favor of bringing people out in boat loads, and suddenly dumping them in huge numbers into a single section of the country, but I see no reason why, three hundred thousand people a year should not be brought into Canada, and scattered throughout its length and breadth, and be readily absorbed. That you would find a few derelicts in this three hundred thousand, and that these instances would be used as an argument against the general policy, goes without saying, but on the whole the three hundred thousand would carry their own weight, and would be a great asset to the Dominion.

There is a very considerable body of public opinion in Canada that the preponderance of people brought to the Dominion of Canada should be British. There is a very strong public sentiment that the traditions of this Dominion should remain British. In spite of the conglomerate population of the United States, the traditions of the United States are still British, and I believe that every citizen of the Dominion of whatever national extraction is heartily in support of maintaining British traditions. I do not think it would be possible to secure from the British Isles alone, a sufficient number of settlers each year to anything like make up a quota of three hundred thousand people a year. Yet so eminent authorities as Mr. Beatty of the C.P.R. and Sir Henry Thornton corroborate the opinion that Canada can readily absorb as many as three hundred settlers each year.

MAKE GOOD CANADIANS

It must be remembered that Great Britain does not wish all of its best stock to leave the shores of the British Isles, yet we do not want in Canada any of the unfit of any nationality. I am of the opinion that there are many nationalities of sturdy stock that would make excellent Canadians. In this respect there devolves upon those of Canadian birth a special responsibility. We must accord to those who come to our shores and become citizens, a most hearty welcome.

There should be no reservations. When a man is a citizen he is a citizen and should be accorded all the rights of citizenship. All we ask in return is that he accept all the responsibilities of citizenship. That is, he must be ready not only to live, but, if necessary, to die for Canada.

When one of foreign extraction comes to this country, we cannot expect that he will immediately have no thought of the country of his origin. He would be a poor citizen of his country who would so soon forget his own, but by extending a most cordial welcome and inculcating ideals of Canadian citizenship, there is no doubt but that the settler born in a foreign country will come to love this country and look upon it as his own, while his children beyond all peradventure will be good Canadians, with strong British traditions.

I think that there are few countries more fortunate than the Dominion of Canada. I believe that no country on the face of the globe possesses a higher average of intelligence, a higher public morality than does the population of the Dominion, nor do I think that any people on earth live under healthier, happier and more fruitful conditions than do the people of Canada.

Man in the Moon

THE wind was cold
It made him shiver.
The drink was warm
And made him quiver.
"I like the cold"
He said, "that brings
With it a bracing
"Draught that stings."

I NEVER could quite understand how a woman could stand the cold. But then Jake says man never did understand women and never will.

SHE'S an angel in truth, a demon in fiction;
A woman's the greatest in all contradiction.
She's afraid of a cockroach, she'll scream at a mouse,
But she'll tackle a husband as big as a house.

She'll take him for better, she'll take him for worse;
She'll split his head open, and then be his nurse;
And when he is well and can get out of bed
She'll pick up a teapot and throw at his head.

She's faithful, deceitful, keen sighted and blind;
She's crafty, she's simple, she's cruel, she's kind.
She'll lift a man up, she's cast a man down;
She'll take him apart and make him a clown.

You fancy she's this, but you find she is that,
For she'll play like a kitten and bite like a cat.
In the morning she will, in the evening she won't
And you're always believing she does, but she don't.

Staff Captain James Merritt of Edmonton will be here for the opening of the new Salvation Army citadel in Prince George on Sunday.

A. E. Richards, supervisor of illustration stations for British Columbia, in his report on affairs agricultural in the Prince George district this season, cites the successful growing and harvesting on a commercial scale of a crop of clover seed as the outstanding feature. He urges the raising of more cows in the district.

The Ladies' Aid of the Giscome United Church realized $450 at its annual bazaar and dance.

The local Rebekah Lodge held its regular meeting in the Oddfellows' Hall on Thursday evening. A social gathering followed the meeting.

Miss Nellie Law, clerk in the Prince George Hotel, drew the horse-Adieu in the Manchester handicap sweepstake which was conducted by the Quesnel Hospital. The horse finished second. Winners of first and second prizes respectively were Mrs. J. MacKay and A. Brentwell, both of Quesnel.
