TERRIBLE STORY OF WHITE AND YELLOW

Wu," Which Was Shown Here Last Night, is to be Repeated Tonight

At ten years old, Wu, heir of a powerful Chinese family of high and ancient lineage, is sent to England to be educated so that he may learn the way of equipped to fight the European invasion of China when he is a man. After fifteen lonely years he returns to China, now head of his family, since his venerable grandfather has gone to join the family ancestors. He marries, and his wife later dies, leaving him with daughter, Nang Ping.

The story proper opens with the revelation of a secret love affair between Nang Ping and a young Englishman, Basil Gregory, whose father has big business interests in China. To Basil the affair has been merely a charming episode. He has come to tell Nang Ping that he is going back to England with his people; and learns to his consternation that she is have a child. He brings his sister and parents to tea and during a conversation with Mrs. Gregory, Nang Ping realizes that no child of hers would be welcome to the white Basil, taken to task by Wu's old Scotch tutor, Muir, who has suddenly awakened to what has been going on, returns to tell Nang Ping that he will marry her; but Nang Ping knows that it is the end. News of the meeting between his daughter and the Englishman is carried to Wu by a prying gardener, who is promptly killed.

Basil is taken prisoner by Wu, who kills his beloved daughter to save her soul from damnation. The elder Gregory, some unseen agency, which he shrewdly suspects to be Wu. Mrs. Gregory, frantic over the disappearance of her son, appeals to Wu for help and accepts an invitation for herself and her daughter to visit at his

BAIT SHORTAGE

Shortage of halibut bait, which has prevailed in northern ports for the past two or three weeks, is now imminent here. It is learned on the best authority that the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co. here has only a few tons left and it is also reported that that concern is negotiating for considerable shipments of herring from the Kildonan cannery on the west coast of Vancouver Island which is understood to have quite a supply left. While it is understood that no boats have yet been refused bait here, it is reported that none at all is available in Alaskan ports and that several vessels are tied up awaiting the arrival of a supply.

Delays encountered as a result of the bait shortage will tend to further reduce the total landings at the port for the year, some of the American vessels having already missed a trip.
