NEGLECT is doubtless the cause of most of the ills that afflict humanity. This is so self evident that it seems hardly necessary to tell you. If your eyes are giving trouble, have them attended to-and at once.

OF ALL absurdities in the kingdom of foolishness, surely the loss of eyesight through neglect is the most inexcusable.

DON'T lose health and efficiency through neglect. Come and see!

WESHOLME THEATRE HAS ATTRAC-TIVE WEEK-END OFFERING FOR LOCAL MOVIE GOERS

At an amateur circus given by the banker Pontency for the amusement of his guests, Elena, his beautiful is mistress and the wife of the Marquis guaranteed not to scratch the Torre De Bianca, meets Robledo, her finest surface and will take husband's boyhood friend, who has justoff the worst kind of tarnish arrived in Paris from the Argentine. Robledo falls in love with her before he Put up in glass jars at he is furious thinking he has been 35c, you get enough to last played with. Fontenoy is insanely jealous of Robledo and upbraids Elena. Also good for Cut Glass She laughs at him and when he confesses financial ruin leaves him. In cospair he kills himself.

The suicide creates a scandal in Paris. Blanca is too humiliated to appear in his old world again and accepts Robledo's invitation to follow him to the Argenine, taking Elena with him in displedience of Robledo's orders that Elena is to remain behind.

Robledo is superintendent of a gigantie dam that is being built near the town of La Presa. He is working hard to change the country from a desert to a fruitful place and hopes to have dam completed before the spring floods. When he returns to his home villagers and workmen welcome Among them are his two friends, Canterac and Pirovani, and Celinda, a shy young girl who loves him.

HER ONLY LOVER Bianca finally arrives and with him Elena. Robledo is furious. He refuses to welcome her. She tells him she has followed the only man who ever really loved her, and that she does not mean Bianca, but Duros, a dangerous outlaw in the village. Duros sees Elena and is enamoured of her beauty. That night he serenades her, refusing to leave at Robledo's command. Elena flirts with the outlaw and Robledo fights him Argentine style-with whips. Although Robledo is victorious he is nearly blinded. When Elena sees this, throws herself on him in an ecstacy of love. But he will not let her nurse him and goes to the dam. Duros gains entrance to Elena's bed- | . room and is surprised by her refusal to accompany him into the desert. He attempts to kidnap her. Bianca comes upon them and is shot by Duros who

Canterac and Pirovani plan a fiesta in Elena's honor. They steal time from their work at the dam and bribe others to help them make preparations. Robledo remonstrates and threatens but to no avail. He does not know of the liesta until the day it takes place, when in a quarrel between the two men over their mistress, Canterac kills Pirovani and escapes, a fugitive from justice. Elena is now convinced that she must as he finds her they are startled by a terrific explosion. Duros has blown up

TERRIFIED CONFUSION

The village is thrown in terrified confusion. All the people turn out to repair the damage. Their homes are in danger for a recent cloudburst threatens a flood unless the damage is repaired. But it is late and at the last moment they flee for their lives, all but Robledo. He is drawn out of danger's way by Celinda. That night he goes to Elena, determined to kill her. She makes no defense. Slowly he chokes her, then suddenly grasps her to him, embraces her, kisses her, and swears his love. There is no gleam of triumph in her eye this time. She waits until he sleeps then steals away. knowing he will think she has deserted him and will marry Celinda.
