NO SIGN OF LIFE

Winter Holds Britain and Rest of Europe in Her Grip While Gales Lash the Shores

LONDON, December 21 .- Winter still holds Great Britain and continental Europe in her grip. Snow and rough winds have heaped up casualties by land and sea. In one of the fiercest gales to whip the British coast, the small schooner Pearl sank off the head of Kinsale in Cork County and the crew of five perished.

In the north of England and Scotland the roads were blocked with snow.

It is cold in Germany and the cold is growing more intense. Breslau experienced a temperature of 20 degrees below zero, the coldest on record since 1799.

In Belgium seven people are reported dead from cold, the weather being the bitterest in fifty years.

In Jugo Slavia the cold weather caused the death of twenty railroad workers at one place and seventeen soldiers at another.

In England, the oldest inhabitant in Monmouthshire, 130 years of age, Rev. C. A. Wood, died from injuries received when falling on a frozen pathway. He served his scattered country parish for 75 years.
