"WINNERS OF WILDERNESS"

Love and War of Early Settlement Days Told in Picture at Mid-week

The Peter Kyne story, "Winners of the Wilderness," here for the mid-week is interesting and picturesque. Following is the tale:

The French Governor had just signed Pontiac, leader of the Six Nations, to join forces with him against the English, when a masked figure appeared, held them up and escaped with the document. The man is forced to take refuge in the room of Renee Contrecoeur, a beautiful daughter of the commandant. He starts to threaten her to save him but her beauty astounds him and he is completely bewitched. He so overwhelms her with his hymns to loveliness that she hesitates to turn him over. Just before the guard breaks in, he picks up her kerchief and leaps out of the window, and flies to his camp in the woods. He is Sir Colonel O'Hara, of Braddock's staff. He sends the document on, but himself returns to attend the French Governor's ball, just to meet Renee again. There, he runs afoul of the saucy Dumas Contrecoeur's aide, and Renee's most persistent wooer. Renee recognizes O'Hara as her masked visitor when he produces her kerchief. When Dumas divines his identity, she again defends him and saves him from capture, while he escapes.

BRADDOCK'S FOOLISHNESS

With Braddock on the way to attack Fort Duquesne is Major Washington and his Virginia Blues. Washington advises Braddock to go in loose Indian style to be ready for any ambush. But Braddock haughtily refuses to be "unmilitary." And they are suddenly ambushed by savages led by Dumas. When Braddock is killed, Washington orders retreat. But O'Hara is cut off. He disguises himself in French uniform and marches to the fort with the French. There, he meets Renee at night, and she is so disturbed over his danger that she admits her love. Dumas discovers them, and turns O'Hara over to the Indians to torture. Renee pleads with her father to spare O'Hara the torture even though he must die.

Contrecoeur persuades Pontiac to release O'Hara to him, then Pontiac curiously insists on leading the fire squad. Renee and O'Hara have a tender farewell, and when she hears the volley, she collapses. Pontiac, however, remembered once when O'Hara spared his life, and he fakes an execution to repay O'Hara, whom he helps escape that night; but Dumas believes O'Hara dead.

INDIANS BEATEN

O'Hara joins the retreating Washington a day or so later. A scout comes to Washington and says that Commandant Contrecoeur and daughter, with Dumas, have set out for Lake George with only a small company. O'Hara is anxious to see Renee, and Washington anxious to capture Contrecoeur, so they set out in pursuit. Meantime, Dumas, knowing Renee loves, or loved O'Hara, has plotted with a chief to have his savages attack the party and kill all but himself and Renee, whom he wants. The Indians ambush the party, but Washington and O'Hara arrive on the scene and vanquish them. O'Hara engages and kills Dumas. O'Hara then tells Contrecoeur he and his party are under arrest, but he allows Contrecoeur to keep his sword. With their prisoners of war, and love—Washington and O'Hara start for Virginia. Probably the most willing prisoner was Renee, who rode happily by O'Hara's side.

BISHOP IS SURE NOW

The general Synod of the Anglican Church meeting at Toronto has recommended the appointment of a bishop for the diocese of Caledonia, which means that the appointment will be made. This is good news since the death of the late Archbishop du Vernet there has been no official head of the diocese holding the proper title. It has all been a matter of finance. Money was needed to endow the bishopric. However, the missionary society has come to the rescue and the small deficit will be made up by them.

It is to be hoped that in making the appointment the local administrator, Archdeacon Rix, will be considered. He knows the diocese well and is in touch with the broad policy so well initiated by the Archbishop. He is known and recognized as the leader in church work in this north country. Naturally newspaper views are not considered in a matter of this kind, but the views of members of the congregations in the diocese will have a great effect upon the appointment and judging from the expressions of opinion heard, the Archdeacon will be the man chosen. His sincerity and capability are both unquestioned.

OUTLAWING WARS OF AGGRESSION

Wars of aggression are to be outlawed. That is the decision of the League of Nations. It is to be assumed that the resolution will be endorsed by all the nations who are members of the league, but the difficulty will be to decide whether or not a war is a war of aggression. It is always easy to agree with a principle and then find a way to evade it.

Before the war Germany declared herself again and again in favor of peace. The general principle was all right but it was its application that failed.

Another thing to decide is whether every nation will take part in the policing of the world. Presumably the party nations will have to do policing and the United States will lend them money with which to do it, charging a high rate of interest.

SEASON FAIRLY LONG HERE

We who live in Prince Rupert or neighborhood do not always realize how long our summer season is when compared with that at other places. In spring when it was warm and pleasant here we read of there being snow on the prairies and again at the week-end there was snow covering the northern part of the neighboring provinces. It is probably gone by now but when snow falls it means very cool weather to say the least.

This morning was almost as warm as June.

THE RAKOVSKY INCIDENT

Franco-Russian relations have received a shock, says the Manchester Guardian. While in Moscow recently M. Rakovsky, the Soviet Ambassador to France, signed a declaration which was presented to the Central Committee of the Russian Communist party by M. Trotsky and other leaders of the Opposition. This declaration called on all proletarian citizens in any country at war with the Soviet Union to work for the defeat of their own Government, and on all soldiers in such a country to desert. The French Government naturally protested. M. Rakovsky's plea that he signed as a member of the Central Committee and not as an ambassador hardly excused his impropriety; and M. Chicherin promptly disavowed his action. M. Rakovsky's resignation was expected, and many advocated a rupture with the Soviet Union. M. Briand has not yet been persuaded to so drastic a step. A semi-official statement declared him satisfied with M. Chicherin's disavowal; later he denied having made any declaration, possibly under pressure from M. Poincare and his cabinet.

MUSICAL POSSIBILITIES

If last night's turnout was at all representative, the choir at First Presbyterian Church is far and away the premier choral organization in the city. There were over twenty voices and almost any one of a dozen were capable of taking solo parts. Under the capable training of John Davey this group of singers has great possibilities and should go farther than singing only in church. It might take up concert work and thus extend its usefulness and add new interest to the members.

The Presbyterian Church building is excellent for musical production and if only there were a pipe organ its possibilities would be limitless.

Hogs are good companions. They never pour out a tale of woe or berate their neighbors.

RINTY IS HERO OF THRILLING ADVENTURE

Famous Movie Dog Seen Tonight in "Tracked by the Police"

"Tracked by the Police," Rin-Tin-Tin's latest starring vehicle for Warner Brothers, directed by Ray Enright, records the courageous fight of a dog hero to save not only one of the greatest reclamation projects in the United States but also his friends engaged in building it.

The story deals with the construction of a great dam and desert irrigation project. For the beautiful exterior the company journeyed to Yuma, Arizona, using the Laguna Dam and reclamation project across the Colorado River as a setting.

Rinty is seen as the dog of a young foreman in love with the daughter of the superintendent. She is also the subject of dishonorable interest of another foreman who has been bribed by a rival construction company to place all the obstacles possible in the way of the work, so that the company would be forced to abandon it. Because Rinty has foiled many of these attempts, the plotters determine to get him. The superintendent is disabled in a mysterious accident, and when the young foreman takes his place, a heinous scheme to put him and Rinty out of the way leaving the girl and the dam unprotected, is hatched. The way by which the schemes of the bad men are coped with by the wonder-dog make thrilling melodrama and gives Rinty an opportunity to display his uncanny brilliance as never before.

FAMOUS NOVEL IS WEEK-END PICTURE

"The Winning of Barbara Worth," the famous novel by Harold Bell Wright, set for the week end here, is so well known it is hardly worth saying more than that the picture is said to be a splendid reproduction of the story with spectacular effects. It has been highly commended wherever it has been shown and doubtless will be enjoyed here.

On the Royal Train
 there were two Credenza Models of the new Orthophonic Victrola--with a fine collection of V.E. Orthophonic Victor Records

"Get the best of everything for His Royal Highness' entertainment" were the orders of the committee in charge of arrangements for the Dominion Tour of H. R. H. The Prince of Wales, Prince George, Premier Baldwin and party.

So naturally, the authorities in charge of the Prince's special train ordered new Orthophonic Victrolas for the luxurious rolling suite of the royal party.

Besides two Credenza Models, one for His Royal Highness and one for Mr. & Mrs.

Baldwin and their daughter,—there went aboard two wonderful libraries of Victor records, specially and carefully chosen.

It was on this train,—superb in all its appointments, that His Royal Highness, The Prince and Premier Baldwin found each their choice of favorite Victor records—playing again and again the hits "At Sundown", "Hallelujah", "Me And My Shadow" and other tuneful Victor numbers.

Any home can have this princely entertainment. There is a choice of seven beautiful models—at seven prices ranging from $775.00 down to as low as $115.00—obtainable at His Master's Voice dealers on convenient payments.
