KELLEY CURTAILING LOGGING OPERATIONS

Over Production is Cause of Temporary Partial Close-Down—Other Industries Continue Active

Owing to over-production and a decrease in the quantity of pulp-wood being used at the Powell River paper mill, the T. A. Kelley Logging Co. is curtailing its logging operations on the Queen Charlotte Islands for the time being. Some two hundred men have been on the payroll and half or more of these, it is understood, will be laid off. According to word received on the steamer Prince John, in from the Island on Saturday, six of the company's ten camps are being closed down. The men are coming to Prince Rupert and Vancouver following the cessation of work.

The curtailment of the Kelley Co.'s operations, which have been going on steadily for practically ten years, comes fortunately at a time when the Islands are looking to fishing and canning to make up for the loss. Every cannery on the Queen Charlottes is expected to be operating this year.

The Baxter Pole Co. and the Albert Moore logging concern are continuing operations in Massett Inlet.
