Wicks Blames Politics For Strikes

VANCOUVER (CP)—At the Social Credit convention, Lyle Wicks, labor minister, hinted politics was to blame for British Columbia's strikes last summer. "This is not a charge," he said, "but I want to say the industrial unrest had political implications. There was a great deal more to it than met the eye." He did not elaborate except to say that when he took over the Labor Department "there was lack of direction at the top."

hospital to be used in cases of emergency.
Various other organizations have worked and given bedding and other articles as well as financial donations.

SPONSORS

When 10 new beds arrived in March they were made available both to individuals and organizations to be sponsored at $250 a bed. Near the end of April all 10 beds had been paid for by sponsors. Late in May a dedication ceremony took place at the hospital when donors of the beds placed a dedication plaque above the fully equipped bed each had donated to the hospital.

Donors were Mrs. J. H. Smith and Mrs. Gladys Jordan, a plaque in memory of their parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Sundal; Walter Warner, two plaques, one in memory of his wife Christine, the second his personal donation; C. "Duke" Newhoven, a plaque in memory of his wife Irene; Kitselas Masonic Lodge, Oddfellows' Lodge, Orange Lodge, the Canadian Legion, Terrace Co-operative Association; and an anonymous donor in honor of "Skeena Pioneers."

The people of Terrace are behind their hospital, and so are others. A $2,000 contribution was made recently by Dr. R. H. Ball, through superintendent Harold Lymon, on behalf of the Columbia Cellulose Company Ltd.

Melbourne Prepares for Next Olympics; Stadium Planned

By TONY SYME

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters)—The next Olympic games, slated for Melbourne in 1956, are a long way off, but the Australians are already busy with all-out preparations for them.
Major item in planning for Olympics is a stadium where the major events will be held.
The Olympic stadium will be erected at a football field a mile and a half from the centre of Melbourne and workmen on the spot now are busy sinking test holes to determine the soil composition and rock strata of the site.
Some other workmen will start tearing down the old football stadium to make way for the new one.
After a contest among 115 top-flight Australian architects, the organizing committee selected Frank Heath, winner of this year's town planning medal, to design the stadium.
The plans he submitted will cost an estimated $900,000 to carry out.
The Heath design includes: Accommodation for 125,000 persons—50,000 seated, 30,000 standing but under shelter, and 45,000 standing in the open.
The problem is to provide more seating accommodation without decreasing the total capacity or skimping exits and entrances.
Heath aimed at clearing the whole stadium in 10 minutes.
His design sets the 615-by-490-foot oval several feet below the level of the present football field. The stadium buildings are correspondingly lower.
OXENHOPE, England, (CP)—Betty, a black sow, vanished for eight days and farmers searching for the animal never thought of looking in a haystack. She had nibbled into the stack and came out the other side eight days later.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Champion's Fine Playing Leaves Mr. New Confused
Mr. Champion gave today's hand such a fine play that Mr. New, the avid kibitzer, thought he was being cheated.

Against the three no trump contract he led the four of spades, Mr. Masters put up the king and the ace won. Mr. Champion led a low diamond toward the board and was pleased to see the queen fall. He won with dummy's king and led a diamond to make sure Mr. New hadn't pulled the wrong card or something. Mr. New discarded a small club.
Now, with the information he had developed from the first three tricks, Mr. Champion promptly led the queen of clubs and went right up with dummy's ace, felling Mr. Masters' singleton king.

This made Mr. New plenty mad. "Wait a minute," he complained. "How did you know Masters had a lone king?"
Mr. Champion thought it was beneath him to reply. But Mr. Masters explained it. "He didn't know I had the lone king," he said, "but he was practically certain I had a singleton club and it might be the king. He had to bring in the club suit to make nine tricks. He was willing to lose a club trick to you, but not to me. If I got the lead, a spade return would defeat the contract."

Mr. New thought a while. "I see that part of it," he said, "but how could he possibly know how many clubs you had?"
Here Mr. Champion took it up.
"When you led the four of spades, New," he said, "I realized you had just four of the suit because I could see the trey and the deuce. The best and most usual lead against no trump is the fourth highest of your longest suit. Now, you subsequently showed up with a singleton diamond. There is only one distribution where your longest suit is a four-carter and you have a singleton. That distribution is 4-4-4-1. On this reasoning, you had four clubs and since there were five in dummy and three in my hand, Masters must have a singleton. That's simple, isn't it?"
Mr. New rubbed his head. "Who wants to take my hand?" he asked. "Think I'll go back to kibitzing."
