

DUDE HUNTER MUCH FIRING

Guide Tells How Goat Was Victim of Barrage and Finally Succumbed.

CHARGED TORMENTOR When Ammunition Gave Out Rocks Were Used in Effort to Kill Quarry

EDMONTON, Sept. 26.—A wild, a very wild billy goat got Al Turner's goat, nearly taking Turner's life at the same time, according to a story brought back from the fields along the continental divide to the west of the Big Smoky river, by F. A. Long, Entrance guide. Long was out with a party of sportsmen from Toledo, Ohio, and arrived in the city at the completion of a 30 day hunt in the mountains.

The party started out from the ranch of Stan Clark, at Entrance, a few days before the hunting season opened on September 1, it being the desire of the party—Al Turner, Howard Bare, and Harry France, all of Toledo—to take in some of the wonderful trout fishing to be had in the mountain streams and to take photos of wild game before starting their hunt.

MONSTER MOUNTAIN GOAT It was when Chester Smith, Turner's guide, saw a monster mountain goat summing himself on a rocky ledge, that the fun—from the point of view of everyone except Turner—really started.

"There, my lord, is your goat; here is your gun," said the guide, handing over the tourist's deadly weapon, after he had been assured by Turner that he had "enough shells to blow the goat clean across into British Columbia."

Caution was recommended by the guide and Turner crawled over some two or three miles of rock-strewn Alberta scenery on his belt-buckle before the guide decided that he was close enough to the goat to make a hit certain.

GOAT WAS PLACID "Now is your chance," whispered Smith, pointing to the goat, which still lay on the ledge, contemplatively chewing his cud and regarding the valley below.

Mr. Turner raised his gun, squinted carefully along the sights, and fired. There was a loud report but the goat did not move.

"Maybe you killed him, but you better fire again to make sure," the guide advised. "He knew stude."

So Mr. Turner fired again. And he fired again and again. At about the fifth shot the goat scrambled to his feet, casting a look of disdain at the hunter, and leaping off along the ledge, apparently in the best of health and spirits. Turner reloaded his not-so-deadly weapon and went in chase of the goat. He caught sight of it again, scrambling along the face of the hillside, and again the echoes of his barrage roared and echoed around the valley.

REAL MILITARY TACTICS At about the tenth shot a bullet struck the goat in one of his legs and crippled him. Spurred on to fresh enthusiasm, the hunter again charged his magazine and charged the goat with a reckless disregard of the consequences, firing as he advanced, as recommended in all the best books of military tactics. Then, by a clever flanking movement he cornered the goat in a corner from which there was no escape—except over the dead body of Mr. Turner.

The goat recognized this too and immediately charged the startled hunter. Uttering bleats of rage, with its head lowered and its horns aimed at a point which would seriously impair Mr. Turner's digestion, if it hit the mark, it came on at a brisk trot, despite the handicap of the wounded limb.

ROCKS AS AMMUNITION His ammunition all gone, the tourist had nothing but rocks to stop the goat and commenced bombarding the goat with these. One hit the goat on his head and staggered him. The hunter yelled to his guide, but the guide had no gun. The goat renewed its attack and once again the hunter stopped its charge with a brisk barrage. The guide was sent back to camp for more shells, while the hunter kept a vigilant eye on the goat. With the other he thoughtfully estimated his chances of coming out unharmed from the 300-foot drop over which the goat was determined to hurl him.

Two more charges were made by the infuriated billy before the guide arrived, out of breath, but well supplied with ammunition. By this time Turner was loath to kill the brave billy, but he knew that it would only eventually die of its wound.

The whole party were well pleased with the result of the trip and intended to return to Alberta next fall. Each was successful in bagging good heads of goat, bighorn sheep and caribou. They failed, however, to obtain any grizzly.

DOMESTIC PHILOSOPHY "That was an excellent paper your daughter read on 'The Influence of Science as Applied to Practical Government.'" "Yes, Helen is the pride of her class, and now that she has mastered the Influence of Science as Applied to Practical Government, I hope she will be willing to find out something concerning the Influence of the Vacuum Cleaner as Applied to the Parlor Rug."

ANOTHER ENGAGEMENT "Rather a sharp thunderstorm last night." "I hadn't noticed; I was talking with my wife all evening."—Life.
