Ball-Bearing Motors Save $705.84

When a large lumber yard five years ago installed Ball Bearing Motors to replace Sleeve Bearing Motors, they immediately eliminated all the troubles common to sleeve bearings: oil soaked windings, short circuits caused by misalignment of the rotor, bearing failures and all the other troubles that tie up machines and increase overhead expense.

The ball bearing motors, in addition to keeping machines in operation, saved the sum of $705.84 annually. On twenty motors, with a total of 600 h.p., they saved annually $300 for repairs, $295.94 in power cost, $95.50 oiling cost, and $14.40 for oil. This is more than one dollar per year per h.p.

WHAT I MIGHT HAVE BEEN

As Told to Harold C. Burr
By HOWARD CHANDLER CHRISTY

HOWARD CHANDLER CHRISTY
"I wanted to be what I am—an artist"

"I sold fruit, pitched hay, raised pigs, worked all day for $1—so I could become a painter. But that isn't to say I don't like other things. I like military life—the army and navy. The nearest I came to being a soldier, however, was to go to Cuba as an artist correspondent for a couple of magazines.

"It's just that creative work comes first, all kinds—music, the stage, literature. Not that I believe I could do anything worth while at those allied mediums.

* * * *

"I wanted to be what I am—an artist.

* * * *

"Our farm in Ohio was near the Muskingum River and like all boys raised on a farm I wanted to get away. I used to watch the boats go down the river, trailing their smudge of smoke, and wish that I was on board. It was the terrific desire to get out and do something. I'd have done anything to get hold of the money to take me to New York.

"I used to ride on the steamers—big three-deckers, regular floating palaces in those days. I was the guest of the management, so to speak. Sometimes I went as far as Zanesville.

But the time I was 6 I knew every captain, pilot, clerk, deckhand and engineer on the river. I always travelled in the pilot house and looked up to the captain as a little pewter god. Today when I return to Ohio I still ride free on the Muskingum. No, I never wanted to be a steamboat captain. I like riding on the boats, all right—working on them was different.

* * * *

"I got in a wedge early, painting a sign for the village butcher. It was the picture of a bull, and I received $10 for it, which was a dollar for each year of my life. I don't recall whether the animal was rampant, but I felt pretty much that way myself. It was the first money I'd ever earned.

* * * *

"Then around 12 or 13 I did a sketch of the schoolhouse where Garfield had taught summer school, and sold it to a newspaper in Toledo; my father gave me a calf and some pigs; I did odd jobs around the farm, sold portrait sketches and started to save for that ticket to New York. At 16 I'd got enough together, as I thought.

"But I didn't make a go of it the first time. I used up the money I'd brought, and back home I went to earn some more. I didn't attempt to find work in the city. I knew what I could do down on the farm.

* * * *

"Three years later the second New York venture clicked. But it wasn't easy. I'd make a drawing for $5 and give the model $3 of it—that's what they received a day for posing. The first studio I rented I slept on the floor for two weeks. Then I nailed a couple of boxes together, and that was my couch for months. I couldn't afford the luxury of a cot. I bought drawing materials and tubes of paint instead.

* * * *

"When I went to the Spanish-American war for Scribner's and Leslie's I'd caught hold. On the transport I bunked with Jack Hines, who afterward took Pershing's place as Chief-of-Staff. He was Lieutenant Hines then. I remember Richard Harding Davis well and the Rough Riders. Theodore Roosevelt was to have been in our mess. It takes me back! We were just youngsters then.

"Yet my admiration for the army and navy wasn't born with that experience. It's hereditary. My father fought in the Civil War, my grandfather against Mexico and my greatgrandfather in the Revolution."

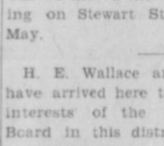
Don't dose a Child's Cold



CONTINUAL dosing upsets children's delicate stomachs. Vicks is applied externally and therefore cannot disturb the digestion. It acts in two ways:

(1) The body heat releases the ingredients in the form of vapors which are inhaled.

(2) At the same time Vicks "draws out" the soreness like a poultice.
