DOG IN MANGER POLICY CANADA

Eastern Newspaper Gives Clear Opinion on Duty in Regard to Immigration

(Toronto Globe)

It is neither possible nor would it be right for a comparative handful of Canadians to hope to occupy a mere fraction of this vast land to the exclusion of millions of landless people in other parts of the world. History recounts not a single instance of success in achieving any such purpose.. There are natural laws which operate to prevent any such selfish dog-in-the-manger policy with regard to idle lands. The inescapable truth is that Canadians must fill up these unoccupied lands with the sort of migrants that will build the kind of greater future Canada to which they look forward, or others will fill them up with those not wanted.

Canada can no more keep out all newcomers than Dame Partington could keep back the Atlantic with her mop. Neither can she escape the problems of a polyglot population if she falls back on the suicidal melting-pot policy by which the United States literally leaped to material prosperity—and to spiritual and lawless chaos such as is exemplified in Chicago. If Canada is to be kept British there is no other way than to fill Canada with decent British stock, or with related peoples who will be glad to become whole-hearted Canadians and proud British citizens.

Perhaps Canada's greatest peril is the "little Canadian's" fear of the responsibilities of greatness. It was not such a spirit which, inspiring the British people in the days of Elizabeth, sent them forth to lay the foundations of the strongest, greatest Empire that has ever been.

We sailed wherever ship could sail,
We founded many a mighty State;
Pray God our greatness may not fail
Through craven fears of being great.

Such craven fears are not confined to Canada. General Smuts recently discovered a petition whereby some South Africans, in 1750, when the white population numbered 5,000, prayed that no more immigration be allowed, because "the country was already overpopulated." There are those in Canada who advocate in this very year policies of pettiness which are just as absurd. What is necessary is that little minds should not be permitted to wreck great opportunities.

EDITOR TORONTO TELEGRAM DIES

Famous Newspaper Man Was Known as One Who Stood up For What he Thought Right

TORONTO, Sept. 28. — John Robinson Robinson, editor of the Toronto Evening Telegram, died this morning aged 66. He suffered from heart failure for some time.

Mr. Robinson was born at Guelph, Ontario, May 9, 1862, the son of an English father and a Scotch mother. He was left fatherless at the age of three. Lacking wealth or influence, he was blessed by the greatest of all vantages, the wise care of a devoted mother. His school days were spent in the public schools of Guelph and Orangeville. At the age of 13 he left school and returned to Guelph to enter as an apprentice in the printing trade in the office of the Guelph Mercury. He mastered his trade in the rays of the "case," and acquired with a friendship with printers that endured throughout his life.

In 1881, at the age of 19, he left Guelph to join the reportorial staff of the Toronto Globe. There he remained for two years, leaving in May, 1883, to take a place on the Telegram under the late John Ross Robertson. His first assignment was the water front. Six years later he was transferred from the City Hall assignment to become editor, succeeding Alexander F. Pirie.

Mr. Robinson came to Toronto when it was a small town, and saw it grow into a great modern city. Upon its destinies his grasp of public affairs, his sound convictions and his vigorous presentation of his views had great influence. His defiance of what in his eyes was considered wrong was courageous and regardless of consequences. His writings dealt with persons and things rather than with abstractions, but when his attacks seemed most personal they were directed not against the persons attacked, but the principles for which they stood.

His warm heart never tired in the battle for the under dog. He once said characteristically. "When you get a paper that for the sake of persons and friendships betrays the public, you are getting a newspaper that is hard on some poor devil who has not a friend this side of Heaven."

WOUNDED VETERANS BELGIUM'S GUESTS

Badly Disabled Men Visit Battlefield and Received Officially

ANTWERP, Sept. 28.—(C.P.) Forty disabled British ex-soldiers were recently the guests of the Belgian Disabled Soldiers' Association, who asked the British Legion to select a party of the most badly wounded men in Britain for a Ten days' tour in Belgium as an indication of Belgium's admiration for, and gratitude to, the British Army.

The whole of Belgium's official life was represented in this feting of British heroes, who were selected by the Legion irrespective of social standing or rang. Some were so badly disabled. Some were so badly disabled with the party a detachment of the R.A.M.C. to attend to them on the journey. Practically all the men had lost limbs.
