PAGANISM IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

When we heard that an English bishop speaks of paganism in British Columbia the first thought is to give an angry retort and remark that there is probably more paganism in England than in this country. But mature consideration shows that an English bishop may well be misled by the appeals for funds from missionaries in Canada who try to make the appeal as forceful as possible.

It must be admitted that there are a few out of the way settlements where no religious services are held, but that does not mean that the people who live there are pagans. It simply indicates that they are rather foolish for going so far away from civilization and losing contact with their fellows. Many of the men are those who have been educated in the English public schools or universities and who have become tired of the kind of Christian life they live in England. They prefer the "paganism" of the far west to the Christianity of the bishops in the crowded centres of the Old Country.

Pagans are not necessarily bad people. Today Christians do not agree and they hate each other intensely. The essence of Christianity is love and tolerance but the opposite is what is seen today among a great many churchmen.

Christianity is the greatest thing in the world, but many so-called pagans are much more Christian in their action and general attitude toward their fellows than some of the professed followers of the man of Nazareth.

In judging the bishop, we must remember that he is appealing for missionary funds and a little hyperbole is sometimes allowable under such conditions.

INJURING OURSELVES

"If I were a stranger coming to Prince Rupert and found the people in the mood in which they are here today, I should at once leave and give up any project I might have in view," declared J. R. Morgan in conversation with the Daily News yesterday. He says it is about time the people here were getting rid of the idea of expecting to be helped and would get down to bedrock and help themselves. Eventually we have to be self-supporting. We cannot always expect elevators and court houses and public works to keep things going. Mr. Morgan says that the mental condition of the people does not affect his business as he does not look for much local trade in Prince Rupert, but he thinks it does the town harm and keeps things back.

In Prince Rupert we get these periodic doldrums and we get unduly elated over things which do not often mean much. What seems desirable is to have a more constant faith in the city and its future and to try to look forward a little and make our plans accordingly.

The Daily News has explicit faith in Prince Rupert. We believe we are going to build a great and beautiful city here and to raise it on solid foundations, and we think it is just such work as is being done by Mr. Morgan that will make it great. Because fish does not sell well and there is a quiet spell, is only one of the periodic recurrences which have come in the past and will come again. Possibly in a few weeks we shall be thinking quite differently.

POWER FROM KITSELAS CANYON

The water power at Kitselas Canyon is being investigated with a view to interesting capitalists in the matter of development. It is well known that in the country above the canyon there is plenty of timber to keep a pulp or paper mill going indefinitely. The timber could be driven down the river for many miles while at Usk and in all the other valleys of the neighborhood there is a plentiful supply of logs.

It is possible that a big power plant at Kitselas would solve Prince Rupert's power problem. The fall there is probably sufficient and the body of water is much larger than at any other point in this neighborhood.

It has often been said that promoters of power distributing plants prefer a big concern to several small ones. That is why Kitselas would appeal to them if it is possible to get sufficient fall.

SIMONDS SAWS

Cross-cut, Crescent Ground, will saw 10% more timber, time and labor being equal, than any other made. This guarantee has never been challenged.

TEACHERS HEAR REPORTS FROM THE DELEGATES

J. S. WILSON, MISS MERCER AND GEORGE STOCKS TELL OF AN-NUAL MEETING

At the annual meeting of the Prince Rupert Teachers' Association in the Booth Memorial School, J. S. Wilson, the president, reported on the business meeting of the annual convention which, as a member of the executive and geographical representative of northern B.C. he had attended. Registrations totalled 896 which resulted in one of the most successful conventions in the history of the federation. Resolutions passed at the meeting were discussed. The success of the superannuation scheme was assured. Some changes in the curriculum were recommended. Mr. Wilson had also attended sectional meetings on social science course and English in the Junior High School.

Mr. Stocks discussed some of the leading features of the High School sections. Changes in the curriculum were also advocated and some suggestions towards the use of less expensive books in some cases.

Miss Mercer reported on the chief speaker of the convention, Dr. Rufus B. von Klein Smid. Dr. Klein Smid emphasized the amount of knowledge that was available and stated that it would take three generations to assimilate all the new knowledge that was already accumulated, mostly within the last fifty years. The trouble today was to evaluate the knowledge. Science of education was the main solution. With so many new ideas it was necessary not to discard the old till the new were found better. Quoting the British Ambassador to the United States, Dr. Klein Smid said that the world was on the threshold of the greatest epoch it had ever known. The faith of the people in education was a challenge to all educationalists and must not be disappointed. Not only was there more intensive education but it was being sought after by people of all ages and conditions. The character of teachers, what they taught and how they taught were vital. A re-valuation of life seemed needed. People rushed through this world but did they really live? What is living? In another talk Dr. Klein Smid stressed the need for a better geographical knowledge of the world as a means toward world peace. Official government relations and commercial relations had failed to bring about that much to be desired international amity. Personal contact between the peoples of the nation was necessary. Get to know people well and there will be no war.

Miss Mercer also reported on some of the sectional meetings she had attended. Mrs. Walker told of the special demonstration in games for the school as part of the physical training course. These games she had already tried out and found valuable and very much enjoyed by the pupils. Other meetings were eye-witnessing at the public schools. Miss Hartin spoke of some of the most recent developments in the arts in primary classes, the use of clay which can be painted instead of or as well as plasticine. A display of this work proved of exceptional interest. A new method of teaching reading was also of interest, and already in practice had been found valuable.

Arrangements are under way for the next meeting to take the form of a social as a wind up to the year's activities.

Children's Colds Best Treated Externally

THAT'S why modern mothers prefer Vicks—it cannot upset delicate stomachs. Rubbed on throat and chest, it acts two ways at once:

- (1) Its healing vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the air passages;
- (2) It "draws out" the soreness like an old-fashioned poultice.

Man in the Moon

A man is tight when his mouth and his morals are loose.

Did you ever hear of the man who never mislaid a collar button and never blamed anybody? You may have done so but it must have been a long, long time ago in the golden age.

He never lost a collar button
His temper too he kept.
He was a very virtuous man,
Most always when he slept.

The man who is paid all he thinks he earns will not live long. How can he?

If all were paid just all they earn,
If all were satisfied,
We'd know millennial days had come
Or else we'd know they lied.

Fish grow rapidly, especially trout after they are taken by an angler.

This is cleanup, paintup week, so the girls are buying more soap and rouge than ever.

I remember years and years ago a man who got so interested in most of the worthy causes that he forgot to contribute to any of them.

TERRIBLE ECZEMA GOES QUICKLY

Strong, Powerful Yet Safe, Surgeon's Prescription Called Morse's Emerald Oil Has Astonished Physicians

Here is a surgeon's wonderful prescription now dispensed by pharmacists at trifling cost, that will do more towards helping you get rid of unsightly spots and skin diseases than anything you've ever used.

In skin diseases its action is little less than magical. The itching of eczema is instantly stopped; the eruptions dry up and scale off in a very few days. The same is true of barber's itch, salt rheum and other irritating and unsightly skin troubles.

You can obtain Morse's Emerald Oil in the original bottle at any modern drug store. It is safe to use, and failure in any of the ailments noted above is next to impossible.—Druggists can supply you at any time.

Miss Doris Nichols, R.N., who arrived at the first of the week from Atlin where she has been nursing and who spent a few days visiting with friends in Port Simpson, called last evening by the Princess Royal for Vancouver.
