THE NEWEST ORTHOPHONIC VICTROLA, THE AUTOMATIC, PLAYS ON AND ON—WITHOUT ATTENTION.

IT'S ALMOST HUMAN

YOU ARE INVITED TO SEE AND HEAR THIS WONDERFUL INVENTION ANY TIME YOU LIKE.

The Automatic Orthophonic Victrola has come at last! An Orthophonic Victrola that changes its own records. An instrument that gives an hour or more of matchless Orthophonic reproduction of music. Changes records while you remain comfortably seated. Picks up twelve records, one by one, plays them in the succession you have arranged; puts them away again, and stops itself. No wonder everyone exclaims, "It's almost human!"

The first and most obvious advantage of the Automatic Orthophonic Victrola is that it gives you music of the same matchless quality characteristic of all Orthophonic instruments. The Tungsolone needle seldom needs replacing. The silent electric motor eliminates winding. There is nothing to do but listen.

So this amazing instrument gives you perfectly reproduced music during dinner, bridge parties, dancing and other social affairs, without attendance for a whole hour. It is invaluable wherever music is desired. A program of operatic selections, a complete symphony, a piano or violin recital; or a balanced, varied concert program, arranged by you and played in the order, by the musicians, of your choice. This is the most important feature of the instrument. Its greatest value is its musical value, its performance is without a peer.

"Uncanny," "Almost Human," "The Poetry of Movement"—are expressions already voiced by Rupert citizens. You are invited to see and hear this marvellous instrument at our store, any

Actress Makes a Hit in "The School for Scandal" at Old Vic. Theatre

LONDON, May 10.—The recent appearance of Miss Jean Forbes-Robertson, daughter of Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, in the role of Lady Teazle at the "Old Vic" theatre here has led to a London dramatic critic to remark that she "has in her the making of a fine—perhaps a great—actress." He says: "Lady Teazle may be regarded as a touchstone of Jean Forbes-Robertson's art. We know that she can simulate a wan tragic beauty and bring the ethereal on to the stage, but her comedy powers have hitherto hardly been tested. In "The School for Scandal" she played the famous part superbly. She brought to Lady Teazle a roguish sense of comedy that never degenerated into pertness as is so often the case! There was finish and style in her acting, and in the scene scene a stern and telling sincerity.

FAREFELL PARTY FOR
MR. AND MRS. ANTON
AKERBERG LAST NIGHT

Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis H. McLeod, 906 Tenth Avenue East, entertained last evening at a delightful farewell party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Akerberg, who are about to leave the city to take up residence in the south. There were about fifty guests present and, on behalf of them, John Dybbavn made the presentation to the guests of honor of a beautiful marabud tray. The evening was delightfully spent with cards and dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Akerberg have been entertained at a number of other farewell functions lately.

Mr. Akerberg will sail for Seattle on the steamer Cardena on Saturday morning and Mrs. Akerberg and family will follow after the school term is over.

No Change Made Yet in Plan to Take Witnesses to New Westminster for Sankey Trial

Provincial police headquarters here are not giving credit to the Canadian Press despatch which was published this week announcing that the jury from New Westminster would come north at the end of the month to hear the evidence in the Sankey murder case here instead of the many witnesses going south themselves to testify. Inspector Spiller stated this morning that his office had received no instructions to this effect and that, so far, no change was being made in the original plan of subpoenaing the witnesses to appear at New Westminster on May 28.

FREE STATE MONEY WILL BE OF SAME VALUE AS ENGLISH UP TO HALF CROWNS

DUBLIN, Ireland, May 10.—A few months hence the people of the Irish Free State will begin to handle new coins intended to displace British coins in local circulation. The contract for minting was given to the London mint, which has submitted Dublin the first striking and now will proceed with production, beginning with silver coins. The new coins will be of the same value as the British coins up to half-crowns, and no higher denomination will be coined at present. Provision has been made for a proportion of silver higher than that in British coins, in order to counteract any possible suspicion of the new coinage. The sixpence and the three-penny piece will be of nickel, the new three-penny piece being the size of the British silver sixpence, but without any milling. Bronze coins also are being struck, but it will take a little longer to substitute these for the corresponding British coins.

HARP RETAINED
A committee of artists and numismatic experts was formed, with Senator W. B. Yeats as chairman, to consider designs, and the recommendations of the committee were accepted. The symbols and inscriptions were considered by the advisory committee after consultation with the Society of Antiquaries, who, while advocating the retention of the Irish harp, strongly opposed the use of hackneyed symbols such as round towers, sunbursts, and shamrocks. Seven selected artists in different countries, including Ireland, were invited to submit models in plaster, composition, or metal, and the committee's final recommendations were unanimous.

It is stated that the new Irish half-crowns, florins and shillings will contain as much as 75 per cent of fine silver and only 25 per cent of copper alloy, compared with equal proportions in the corresponding British coins. The six-penny and three-penny pieces will be of pure nickel. Pennies, half-pennies and farthings will be of bronze. Emblems of Irish industries, including agricultural animals, appear on one side of many of the new coins, and the Irish harp is represented on the other.
