HARVESTER EXCURSIONS

Grievous complaint has been made locally at the running of harvester excursions from this part of the province just at a time when men are badly needed here to take care of the fish harvest. It is pointed out that the salmon fishing business here is purely a seasonal one just as the harvest on the prairies is seasonal. By delaying the harvest trains a couple of weeks from this point, the local work would be completed and no hardship to local employers brought about. We all realize the need of men in the harvest fields, but there was no great rush on the part of the Government to put on their harvest excursions from Great Britain where there are plenty of idle men who would benefit immeasurably from the opportunity to work. Instead of that they try to induce men to go from here where they are needed for a week or two longer. Even a few days delay would make a great difference here. It seems if the dates arranged for the excursions have been set without thought of the possible injury it might do to the premier industry of Northern British Columbia.

OPTIMISTIC FEELING

There is a feeling of optimism shown here in many quarters which seems to indicate not only that there will be a prosperous autumn but that there will be a general improvement here from this time on. It is pointed out that, so far as this autumn is concerned, the Seal Cove mill is working steadily, the Billmor mill is being erected and will soon be in operation and particularly that the result of the shipbuilding operations at the Drydock will produce an autumn payroll which will be most beneficial to Prince Rupert. Then there is a pretty good fishery season, so far as lower grade salmon is concerned. These are the chief immediate prospects but others may develop. The prospect for more grain shipping is good and if this proves to be correct it will mean more ships visiting here, more men employed at the elevator and more on the railroad. All this seems to indicate general improvement for the port which will make the coming winter a better one than has been seen for a number of years.

REV. MR. WRIGHT
IS INDUCTED

BECOMES PASTOR OF HAZELTON AT INTERESTING CEREMONY THIS WEEK

HAZELTON, Aug. 10.—Rev. T. H. Wright, B.A., the newly appointed minister of the pastoral charge of Hazelton, in the Prince Rupert Presbytery, took place last Monday evening in the United Church, New Hazelton.

Rev. J. R. Hewitt, B.A., a former pastor of Cumberland, B.C., and Dr. H. C. Winch of Hazelton, were commissioned by the Presbytery to conduct the proceedings, and to induct Mr. Wright to the pastoral charge of Hazelton and adjoining territory which he is to cover. Mr. Hewitt outlined the steps leading up to the appointment and stated that it was a pleasure to visit his former charge and meet the friends of former years, and it was an added pleasure and honor to be present at the induction of Rev. T. H. Wright, B. A., whom he had favorably known for some time.

He said that Mr. Wright took his theological course of studies in Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal, at the same time taking courses in Philosophy in McGill University. Coming to British Columbia in 1906 he continued his Arts work in connection with Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. On the organization of the university of British Columbia Mr. Wright transferred his undergraduate standing in Arts from Queen's to that of U.B.C. and after a four-years' course in residence he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from that institute of learning.

GRADUATE OF B.C.
Those four years' course of study in British Columbia were taken while Mr. Wright had charge of a pastorate in Vancouver.

During his ministry Rev. Mr. Wright has been pastor of Sidney, Vancouver Island, Jubilee, B.C., where parsonages were built under his supervision and where the churches were soon put upon a self-supporting basis. His last two charges were Beaconfield, Vancouver, and Howe Sound, where he has just completed a four-years' pastorate.

For seven years Mr. Wright was Journal Secretary of Conference and for several years Financial Secretary of the District.

Rev. Mr. Wright put the necessary questions to the pastor elect and gave the charge to the minister. Afterwards he was duly inducted into the pastoral charge and introduced to the officials of the church and members of the congregations.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME
Dr. H. C. Winch, M.P.P., in a very appropriate address gave a welcome to the pastor. He said: "We welcome Rev.

Mr. Wright to the pulpit. He would give appropriate messages, and it was important that the minister give the message of truth concerning man in his relationship to God.

We welcome Mr. Wright to our homes. Here he could get acquainted with the problems and difficulties, the joys and sorrows of the people and thus would be able to act as a true shepherd to the flock.

We welcome Mr. Wright to the community and social activities of the localities where he is called to labor."

He wished for Mr. and Mrs. Wright the highest success in their new field of labor and urged all present to make this success possible by a spirit of loyalty and co-operation. Loyalty in attending regularly the means of grace and active co-operation by supporting the various benevolent enterprises of the church.

C. H. Sawie, of the Omicron Herald, New Hazelton, and John Newick, Hazelton, on behalf of the two churches introduced Mr. and Mrs. Wright to the people.

The ladies of the church served refreshments. The young ladies of the church led the community singing and Miss Jean Burns sang a solo with telling effect. After spending a social hour the proceedings closed with the National Anthem.

Man in the Moon

Good day, folks. This is really very unusual weather.

Just listen to 'Opportunity'. The campaign manager states: If you rustle hard you'll get the prize. It's failure for him who waits.

Ramsay MacDonald, the labor leader is much more candid than many of his followers. That is what differentiates a statesman from a politician.

Nature never intended people to pat themselves on the back it is clear from the way the arms are hung, yet some people are going it all the time.

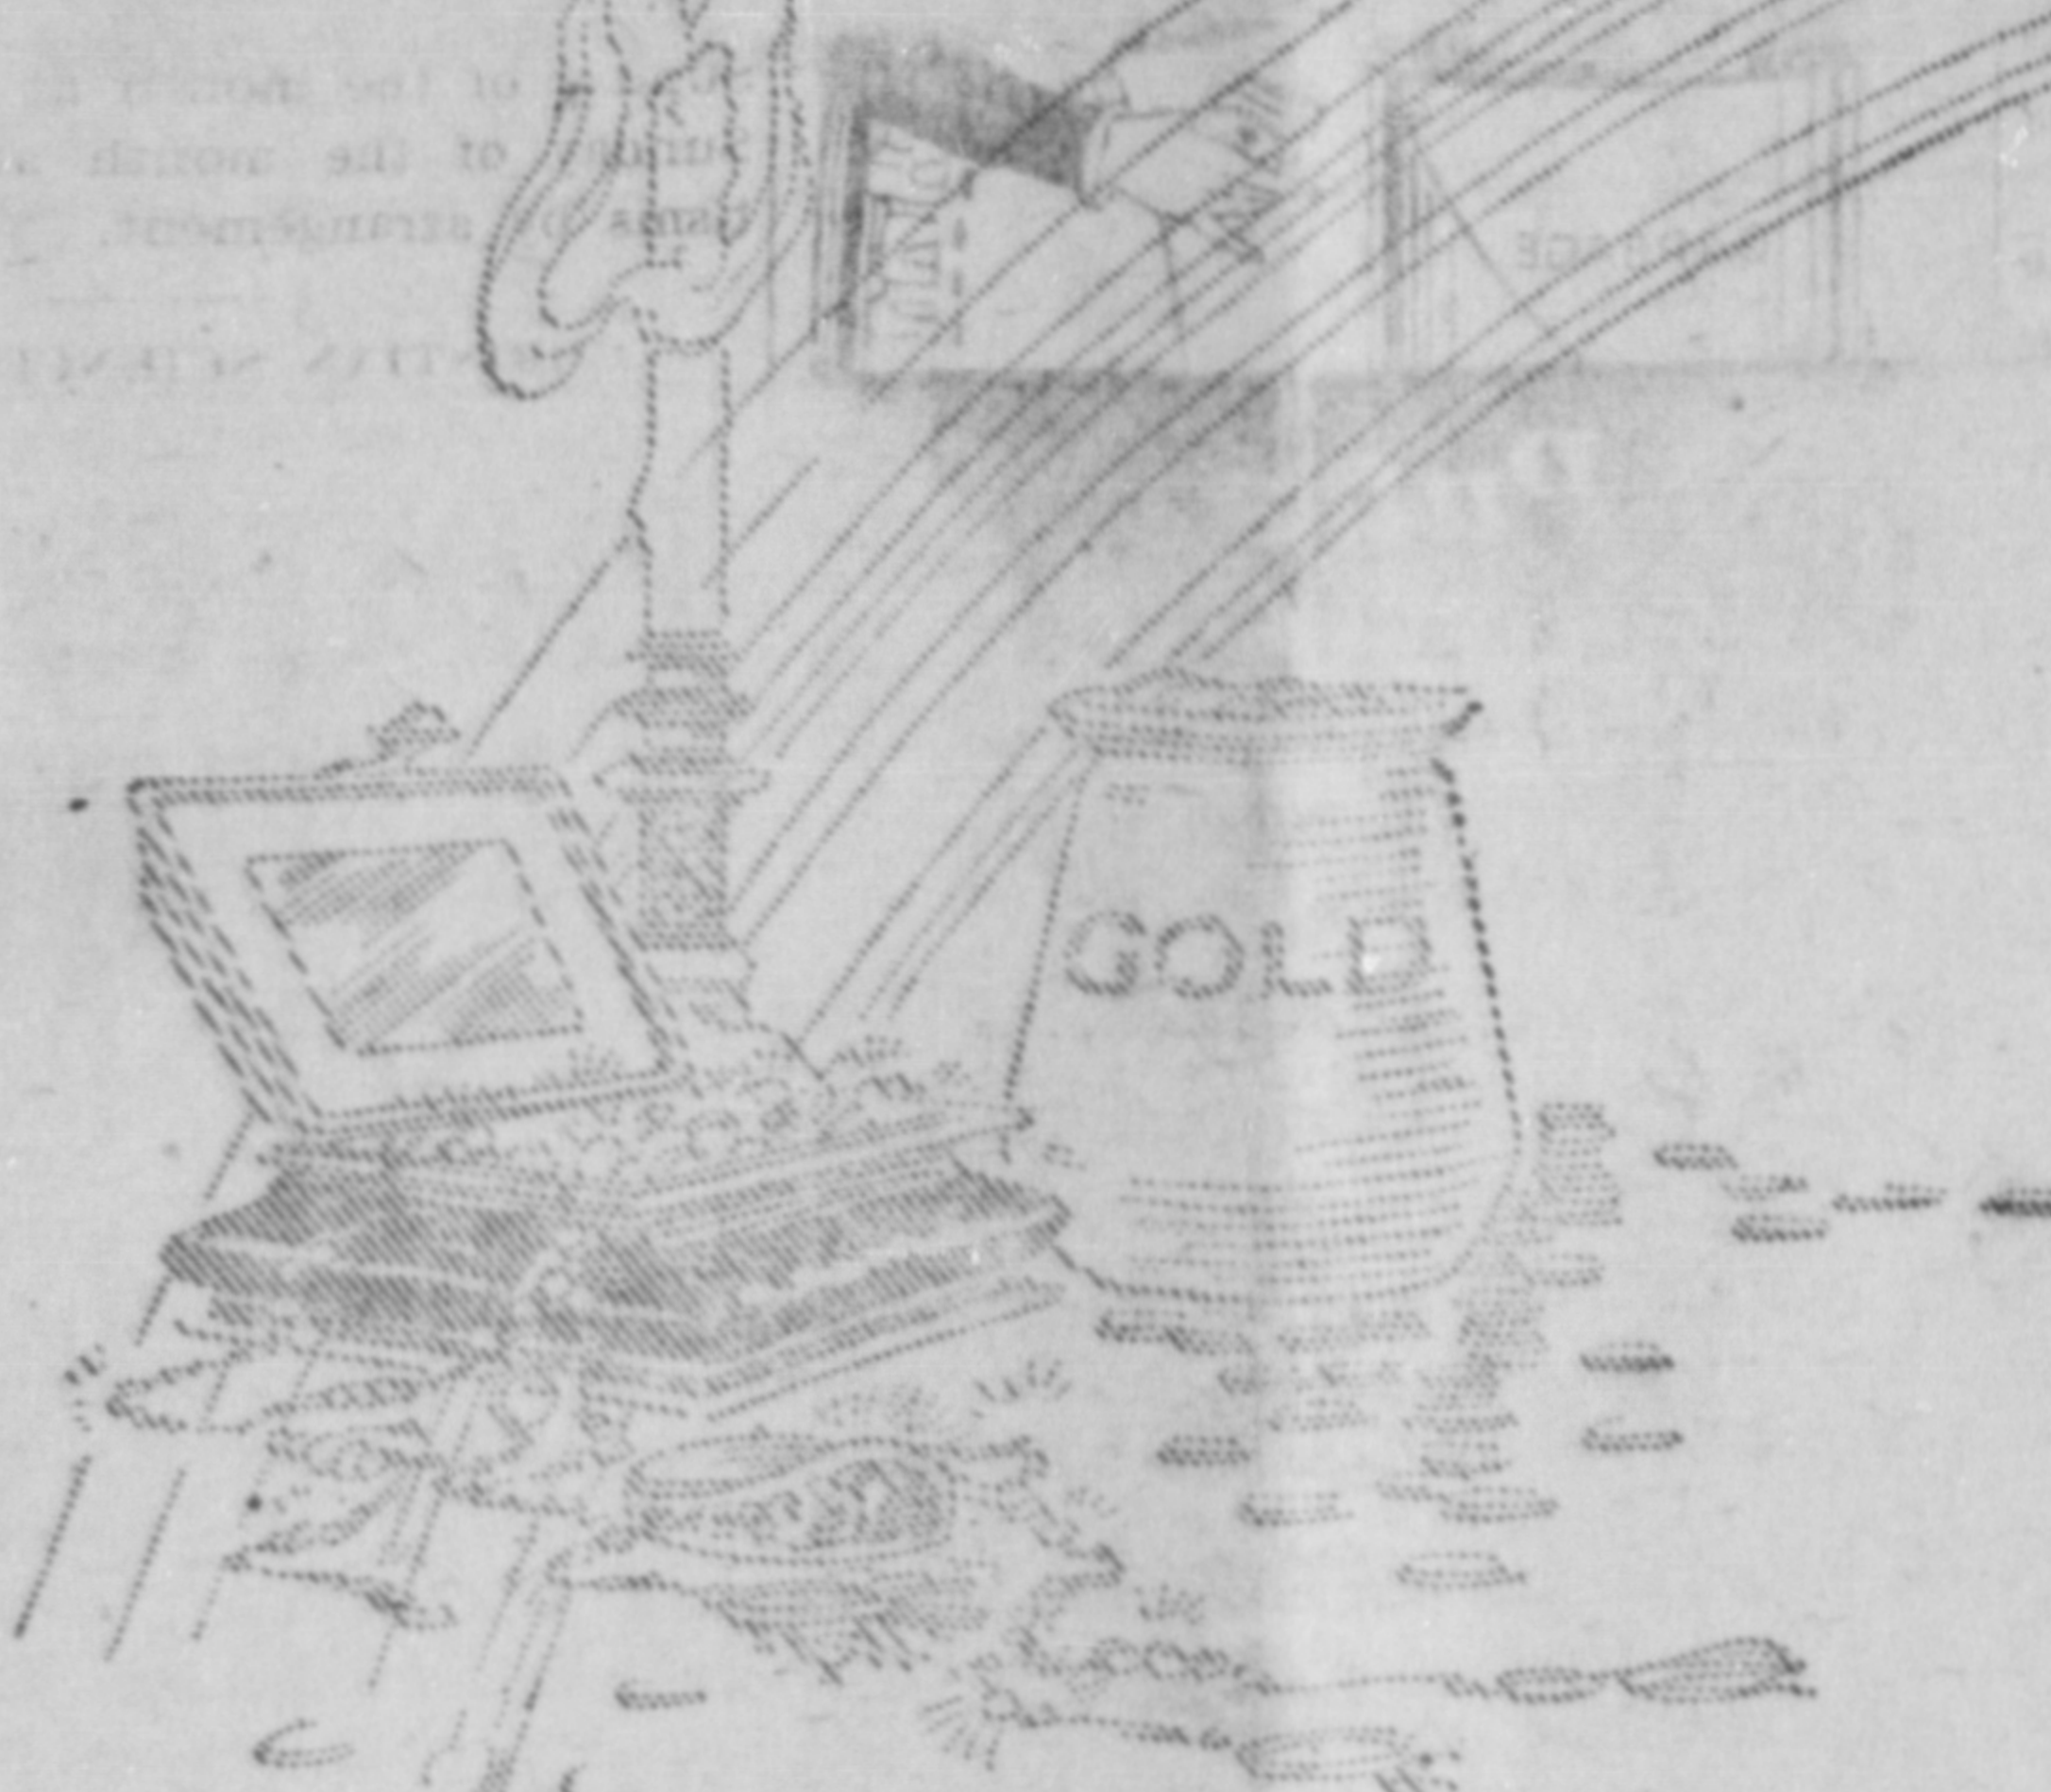

What puzzles a baseball player is how a golfer can play his game without a jeering audience.

Because a man is dressed in ice cream clothes is no indication that he can play tennis.

Prince Rupert is changing. Instead of wondering whether to buy an outboard motor or a small cabin cruiser, the head of the family today wonders whether to invest in a Ford, or Chevrolet or an Essex Six.

A hick town is a place where very unimportant people elevate their noses.

She chased Rainbows..

—and her dreams seemed to come true! For one brief moment the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow was hers, and then . . .

THE San Francisco disaster had left Cherry an orphan in infancy —without a trace of her pedigree. And forever there was uppermost in her mind the searing thought that, perhaps, she was . . .

Dan, the garbage man, had found her after the earthquake, wandering about the debris, in her little nightgown, crying for her "mama"! He took her home — and amidst the unlovely surroundings of the city's poorest district, Cherry received her first impressions of life and its many intriguing ramifications. But although Dan drove a garbage wagon, he saw to it that the garbage did not taint his home, and Cherry merged into young womanhood with a keen sense of right and wrong. Naturally, she was lacking in the outward manifestations of poise and culture, but a certain innate refinement, a part of her pre-natal equipment, no doubt, would always come to her rescue.

It was this same inherited "spark" that had appealed so strongly to Dick, the young and spoiled scion of the aristocratic Berrengers. Obviously she did not belong to his smart set, but he always got what he wanted — and so they were wed. After the first year of rapture, Cherry was too absorbed in the care of her new treasure, young Berrenger the Third, to observe her husband's deflection.

Baby's advent had helped to span the social gulf existing between the Berrenger family and "the garbage man's daughter"—and all went well until a cheque for a small sum, and endorsed by Cherry, had been discovered "raised" to a considerable sum . . . and the blame fell on her shoulders! Stunned at the injustice of the accusation, Cherry's eyes sought Dick's for protection—but he ignored her appeal and remained silent. And, like a flash, Cherry read "Guilt" written all over him! But she loved this coward, her husband, and she just could not disillusion his trusting parents, so she packed up her things and fled! Yes, she started off with her bright-eyed boy, but at the very thought of denying little Dicky the luxury and culture that were his heritage, she returned him to his nursery — — — and with bleeding heart and shattered dreams, Cherry silently passed out of their lives—alone!

What did she do? Where did she go? Did she return to the fetid atmosphere of the garbage wagon? Or, perchance, did she again find the pot of gold at the rainbow's end? All these questions are answered in "SHATTERED DREAMS", which appears in TRUE STORY MAGAZINE for September . . . now on the newsstands. You will be astounded and thrilled at the solution and will find difficulty in keeping back the elusive tears of joy at the triumph of right over wrong!
