MACLEAN AND TOLMIE

It is rather fortunate for British Columbia that neither of the leaders is an orator. They are just plain talkers, able to state their positions, but not spellbinders. Hon. Dr. Tolmie who was here Friday proved that.

All the political meetings so far have been very free from personalities and have been on a plane far above anything heretofore. Premier MacLean has been a minister of the crown for twelve years and there is not a breath of suspicion against him. Dr. Tolmie was also minister of agriculture in the Dominion cabinet and came out equally free from possible taint. Both are clean men and there could be no mistake in choosing either. However, Dr. MacLean has just been appointed to the position of Premier and in spite of the insinuations of the Conservative leader, there are no barnacles on him. The expected desire of the electors will be to give him a chance and then later, when Dr. Tolmie has won his spurs in opposition for a term or two, he will be given an opportunity to lead a government.

DISAPPOINTED OVER ROAD

Many people who heard Dr. Tolmie speak last week were sorely disappointed over his highway policy. He stated that he would make a survey if he were placed in office and the road would be continued as funds were available. The matter was put up to him by the local candidate, James Thompson, but he got little backing from his leader.

In the meantime construction work is going ahead under the MacLean government and so are the surveys.

WHY VOTE FOR PATTULLO?

One of the best reasons for supporting Hon. T. D. Pattullo and the present government in the elections is that a friendly government now has in hand the negotiations for the sale of the P.G.E. which would relieve the province of a great financial burden. To change the government at such a time would be fatal. See what happened to Prince Rupert after the last Federal election. As long as the Mackenzie King government continues in office it would be very desirable to have a Liberal government in office in British Columbia. In addition to the P.G.E. there is the railway lands negotiations to be considered and the western outlet for the Peace River, all of which would be jeopardized by returning the Conservative party. Protestations to the opposite are of no value. We can judge of the future on the experience of the past.

ALL SOCIALISTS NOW

(Vancouver Star)

The coming provincial election will be very largely decided on the personalities of the candidates respectively proposed by the political parties. This is because, while so far as political principles go, the line that divides Liberals from Conservatives federally, has become rather indistinct in recent years, that which separates them in the provincial field has virtually disappeared.

Party lines in provincial politics, indeed, have never quite coincided with party lines in Dominion politics. Time was when they were unknown in the British Columbia legislature. The late Sir Richard McBride introduced them just a quarter of a century ago when, being called upon, as leader of the opposition, to form a government, he declared that the government would be a Conservative one. So far as provincial issues were concerned, party lines had no more to do with the case than King Charles' head with the celebrated petition of Mr. Dick, the friend of David Copperfield. They were necessary, however, to bring some discipline into provincial political affairs, in which, for some years, every member had been pretty much a law unto himself, with the result that governments had come and gone with almost the frequency of French administrations.

Party lines have now been established at Victoria for twenty-five years, but if one were called upon to decide as between the platforms of the two elder parties in the present election, which was the Conservative and which the Liberal document, he would be sorely puzzled. He would find that both were aiming at the same objects, the only question being which was prepared to go farther than the other in proposing what used to be called advanced legislation. In the language of the late Lord Salisbury, Liberals and Conservatives might say in chorus "we are all Socialists now," for much of the legislation to which both sides are committed would have been scouted as almost ultra-socialistic not very many years ago.

Victory and King Tut Properties at Smithers Look Promising —Developing Big Ore Body on Ingenika River

The new plant at the Victory mine on Hudson Bay Mountain near Smithers was recently put into operation and has been performing in a manner highly encouraging to the management. All development continues to centre in the long No. 1 tunnel planned to get under the ore showing in No. 2 tunnel higher up the hill. This tunnel has still to go about 170 feet before a point is reached where ore can be expected although several promising shoots of ore uncovered in the course of the tunnel lead to the belief that ore may come in considerably short of the objective point. A good start has been made on improvements to the road leading to the Victory mine and men are now at work erecting buildings required to house the power plant and for other purposes. Two machines are now in operation on the new plant and eight men are being employed in two shifts. The property is under development for Capt. J. J. O'Brien of Philadelphia.

There is also enthusiasm as to the prospects for the King Tut mine on Hudson Bay Mountain in which Capt. O'Brien is interested. Very encouraging reports are being received from the property. Only sixty feet remains to be driven in the tunnel to get to the point where ore is expected and, from showings uncovered by earlier work, there is confidence that very high values will be obtained. With the machinery working in excellent shape, the tunnel is being extended at a rate of over three eet daily. During the past few days a little galena has been showing up in the face of the tunnel and the result of each round is being watched with eagerness in the hope that any round of holes may break into the main ore body. At present there are eight men employed in two shifts on the King Tut and, at the present rate of progress, the objective should be reached early in July.

Jack Mullen has arrived at Hazelton after spending the past winter on the Ferguson mine, now known as the Ingenika Lead Mines, in the Ingenika country, bringing some of samples from the property which is under development under the personal charge of W. R. Wilson, president of the Crow's Nest Coal Co. While the ore is chiefly silver and zinc with relatively small silver contents, the body of ore is so immense that development is believed to be fully justified. Work carried out on a rather large scale has proven quite satisfactory and operations are to be continued to ascertain if, at a point so far from transportation facilities. The erection of a mill is justified. The property has already been favorably reported upon by Douglas Lay, resident engineer for the northeastern mineral survey district, who expects to make another visit to the Fort Grahame country toward the end of August. As far as transportation is concerned, Mr. Lay is of the opinion that if the mineral deposits of the district adjacent to Peace Pass are opened up on a big scale, as is being done, the matter of a railway will be quickly and easily solved.

CANYON OF ADVENTURE ACTION AND ROMANCE

"The Canyon of Adventure," a title that suggests all of the fast action and romance, as well as the daring stunts for which Ken Maynard is noted, is scheduled for tonight.

Ken's ability as a trick rider is now known throughout the world, wherever motion pictures are shown and in such a vehicle as "The Canyon of Adventure," which is of the type of out-door picture to win the plaudits of every follower of action pictures, he is steadily increasing that reputation. Tarzan, the wonder horse, who also has a following all his own, is seen in several new and novel stunts taught him by Maynard for this feature.

The story is of early California during the days of Spanish rule.

RIN-TIN-TIN IS ACTOR IN "A RACE FOR LIFE"

Rinty is here again and this time it is in a racing picture.

Rin-Tin-Tin is first seen making his way south by box car with his pal Darny O'Shea, who, after many difficulties, gets a job as jockey. Rival horse owners try to cripple Danny's horse. Rinty attacks and is blinded. The boy hides him and is himself kidnapped. Rinty escapes from his shack and frees the lad in time for the big races! But here comes the most exciting of all the exciting sequences of the piece. Rin-Tin-Tin has roused his audiences to wild enthusiasm many a time, but never has he had a more thrilling vehicle than "A Race for Life."

BRITISH NAVY PICTURE HERE ON WEDNESDAY

"SECOND TO NONE" IS ROMANCE OF THE SERVICE SHOWING WAR-SHIPS

"Second to None" is a story of the British Navy and deals with the adventures of a little girl left an orphan. She was shipwrecked, picked up by H.M.S. Bellatrix. The story then deals largely with the girl and her lover, Bill Hyde who, disappointed had determined to go to the desert.

Week after week, the scouts of the navy moved on their appointed course, and then one day towards evening, a suspicious spiral of smoke was sighted, and the British commander decided to close and investigate.

As the sun went down, three enemy ships came over the horizon quickly flecked with gun flashes. Bill saw all his pals fall one by one around him. The deck became a shambles. . . and held in the pitiless glare of the enemy's searchlights, the Determinations fought on unavailingly. With his gun put out of action, Bill went to the torpedo tubes . . . and an enemy ship, hit fair and square, heeled, turned turtle and sank. But the hit was not seen from the bridge, where the commander was lying, with a wound in the head, pointing to the yardarm from which the ensign had been shot away. It was Bill Hyde, one time newspaper boy, some time deserter, who climbed through shell-bursts to hoist a new flag . . . and as he fell to the bridge, mortally wounded, the enemy's searchlights picked up the hulls of the rescuing British cruisers, and turned tail and fled.

MARY PICKFORD PRETTY PICTURE

Amid the flood of new productions, superspectacles, would-be epics and the like that have appeared on the screen this season, "My Best Girl," Mary Pickford's new comedy romance of the 5 and 10 cent stores, comes as a welcome relief.

Unlike so many recent film dramas, "My Best Girl" makes no attempt at pretentiousness, nor at imposing magnificence. It is purely a simple, human, absorbing story of a shy little girl employee in a "nickel-and-dime" store, who falls in love with the son of the millionaire owner of the establishment.

Much of the laughter in the picture can be attributed to the excellent comedy cast. Mack Swain, one of filmdom's foremost fun-makers, is a scream as the police judge, and Lucien Littlefield plays the difficult role of the henpecked father to perfection. Sunshine Hart has one of her best parts as the funeral-loving, hypochondriac mother, and Carmelita Geraghty is highly effective in the role of Mary's wild and wayward sister.

Man in the Moon

The leader has come, the leader has gone and Jake says he is wondering what it was all about.

Those who expect Dr. Tolmie to say he would build the road to Terrace next year were greviously disappointed to get nothing but the promise of a survey.

The other day I saw several men in straw hats and I am as a result forced to the conclusion that some people look worse than other that way.

Next time the Conservative leader comes to town he will not spill any of his obscure jokes. After doing it once the other night he did not repeat. Explaining spoiled the effect.

Did you ever hear the story of the man who went out looking for a mine and returned without it? That's the story.

A youth met a maid at the shore,
And he said, "You're the girl I adore;
I trust, yet, I do,
That I'll see more of you."
And she blushed, and he wondered what for.

The oversized woman, explaining to her companion why she got off the car backwards, said that she overheard one of the straphangers who stood in front of her, whisper to his neighbor straphanger that when the fat woman got up he was going to pinch her seat.
