27th Brigade Collects Gifts For Refugees
HANNOVER, Germany (CP) - Members of Canada's 27th Infantry brigade group here hope to make Christmas a bit more pleasant for refugees from Eastern Germany in this area.
The troops are collecting money, clothing, shoes and food-stuffs for distribution as Christmas gifts. More than 60,000 displaced persons are crowded in and around this rail centre.

'Murderers' Fed Regular Prison Meals
TORONTO (CP) - Steve Suchan and Leonard Jackson were hanged back to back early today for the murder of Toronto detective Edmund Tong.
There were only 10 witnesses. Prison officials said the two men were not given a choice of their last meal. They were served regular prison fare.

Mr. Abel wasn't too keen about any opening from his hand today but he finally decided on the king of spades. The defence might have been a little easier if he had opened the king of clubs but he had no way to be sure of that.
Miss Brash let the king of spades hold and Mr. Abel had another chance at the winning defence. Hoping to get Mr. Dale in to lead a diamond back, he came out with a low club. But Miss Brash won, cashed the ace of trumps, finessed the jack of spades and threw off a diamond on the ace of spades. Thus she lost only a spade, a heart and a diamond, making her doubled contract.

You and I see that he could have defeated the hand by switching to diamonds at trick two. It's tough leading from an ace-queen, but Mr. Abel should have seen it, too.
Mr. Dale had to have something for his raise to two clubs. He had nothing in spades. On the bidding it was practically certain he had no winners in hearts. He should have either the ace of clubs or the king of diamonds.

If Mr. Abel had laid down the ace of diamonds at trick two, Mr. Dale would have flashed the nine, announcing possession of the king. If he had not held the king, he would have played his lowest diamond in which case Mr. Abel could have led a club to his partner's (supposed) ace. Thus the defenders would have won one trick in each suit.
True, if Mr. Dale had held the ace of clubs and not the king of diamonds, then a club shift at trick two - and a diamond return - would have beat the contract two tricks. But Mr. Abel's first job was to be sure to set the contract at all.
Incidentally, Miss Brash's concession of the first trick was very good as it put Mr. Abel on the spot for the right shift before he knew too much about the hand.

Second Lead Can Often Determine Result of Hand

Before you make the opening lead you have seen just the 13 cards in your hand. When next you are on lead for the defence, you have seen the 13 cards in dummy, too, and you have watched the play to one or more tricks. On a judgment basis your second lead should be better than your first.
