Revivifying The Glands

Because they say certain glands wear out and that we lose youth in consequence, some "scientists" advocate their removal and the substitution of equivalent glands from a monkey. They are wrong, for these glands did not wear out—their supply of vital energy was cut off.

Every gland and organ in the body functions by means of vital energy delivered over the nerve lines. This energy is necessary, but the delivery of it is dependent upon keeping the nerve lines open. This is accomplished by Chiropractic Spinal Adjustments.

By my chiropractic health method I correct diseases of the eyes, ears, nose, throat, lungs, heart, stomach, liver kidneys, bowels and lower organs.

SMELT FISHING MAINE COAST

WINTER SHELTERS OFTEN DEMOLISHED BY BAD WEATHER OR VILLAGE GOES OUT

PORTLAND, Me., April 14. — Unlike the "men who go down to the sea in ships," a class of fishermen in Maine each winter goes down to the sea in shanties.

They are the smelt fishermen and each winter "smelt villages" spring up on the ice along the coast of Maine to linger from the time the ice is thick enough until fishing laws or warm weather end the season. Fishing through the ice on Maine's salt rivers and inlet assumes the proportions of an industry.

A red-blooded sport is smelt fishing. Years ago the hardy "down-easters" fished with little more than warm clothing or a wind-break for shelter. A Boston man, Job Secor, was attracted to try his hand at the sport in the seventies. He froze both ears and one foot and caught no smelts. But instead of giving up the sport he built what is said to have been the first smelt shanty—a canvas covered shack with a little box stove inside. He is credited with being the father of the smelt villages.

Shanties are frequently little more than frameworks covered with cotton cloth. A little oil stove, sometimes a wooden floor, a hatchet or axe, hooks, lines and bait are included in the smelt fishermen's equipment. Marine or clam worms are said to be the best bait. The baited hooks are hung from "spreaders" which permit suspension of from four to six lines.

There is little shifting about of shanties now. The fishermen frequently banks his shack with snow and pours water on the snow, freezing his little shelter to the ice.

Then, sometimes in the company of a second fisherman, he sets about the task of catching the smooth, shiny fish with their peculiar, distinctive smell, a smell described by one authority as a cucumbers, violets and rushes. Silence is the rule. Radio sets, with earphones, keep the fishermen in touch with the world.

There are hazards to smelt fishing aside from the cold. Sometimes a gale sweeps the ice, hurling itself upon the little shacks, tugging them from their moorings and scattering hatches, fish, lines and the shanties themselves. At Sasanao Bay this winter 65 out of 100 shanties were totally demolished in such a gale, a loss that entailed serious suffering to many a fisherman who had invested his little capital in his gear with a view to earning a living from selling smelts.

A year ago the residents of one smelt village came down to one of the bays one morning to find that the ice had gone out of the bay carrying their village with it. By some freak of nature the same stretch of ice was swept back into the bay on another tide, and back with it came their shanties.

EDMONTON SAID TO BE BEST BUSINESS CITY

Almost Impossible to Get Sample Rooms for Travellers Owing to Number There

EDMONTON, April 14.—With Edmonton holding the reputation as the best business city in the Dominion today, and with travellers from every manufacturing centre in the East and West reporting doing a fine trade here, demands for sample rooms at the various hotels are so great that waiting lists have been enlarged, and in a number of cases the hotelmen are securing outside sample room accommodation for their patrons.

Even then travellers are being compelled to wait over in Edmonton from three days to a week before they are sure of getting sample rooms, and every available combination room, where travellers can show samples and at the same time make their headquarters in the room, is filled.

"Edmonton is only experiencing the beginning of a wonderful year," declared one seasoned veteran of the road at the Macdonald. "This is only the start of the spring rush, but it will keep up all summer, as Edmonton is today recognized as one of the best business centres in the Dominion, if not actually the best at the present time, while the Edmonton district is getting the reputation also of being one of the most prosperous sections of Canada."

A FINAL OFFER

It was a meeting of Abe's creditors.

"There, gentlemen, are my assets and liabilities," said Abe, "and the very best I can do, gentlemen, is ten cents on the dollar."

So the creditors looked over the situation and reported back that they felt 40 cents on the dollar would settle the matter. Abe took time out, and then he compromised.

"Gentlemen, I offer you 10 cents and you say 40. Now, gentlemen, I make you a final offer of 25 cents, but honest, gentlemen, I'm losing money on it."—Chicago Post.
