ARTIFICIAL EARS MADE

Deaf Students Now Learn to Hear With Finger Tips

WONDERFUL RESULTS

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 12.—The deaf may soon be able to "hear" through their fingers much more easily than they do at present by employing the various mechanical "ears" that are in use, according to Professor Robert H. Gault of Smith College.

Professor Gault is doing research work at the college psychological laboratory which he says he hopes will make it possible for those who have lost their hearing to understand ordinary conversation through vibrations of the voice detected by the finger tips.

He explained "that the skin can detect 2600 vibrations per second which include all the vibrations that are essential to the understanding of human speech." For the last five years he has been working with the deaf developing an instrument through which these people may feel these vibrations.

The instrument is made for Professor Gault by the Bell Telephone Company. It crudely resembles an ear but when used by a person who is deaf it is held between the thumb and finger tips instead of being placed at the side of the head as is customary. The person using this instrument has learned the different vibrations set up by speech and through their interpretation may easily carry on a conversation and "hear" a person who does not raise his voice.

The instrument, Dr. Gault pointed out, has another use also. A deaf person using it learns to control and modulate his own voice. This is taught by letting the pupil first feel the vibrations of the instructor's voice, and then teaching him to cause the same vibrations when he speaks. Combined with lip reading, Dr. Gault said, this instrument enables a deaf person to understand speech almost perfectly and without nervous strain. Normally it takes from 50 to 80 hours of instruction to teach a deaf person to understand conversation.

Dr. Gault's work began at Northwestern University in 1922. In his first experiment a tube was run through a wall between two sound-proof rooms. Dr. Gault spoke into the tube and a subject placed his hand over the end of it to feel the vibrations. The subject noted differences in the vibrations of different sounds in the doctor's speech and in 10 months, with 25 minutes' practice each day, the subject has learned to "feel" 38 words.

FISHERY QUESTION IS STILL AN OPEN ONE

Telegram to Victoria Paper Declares Announcement is Premature

The Victoria Colonist of recent date says: In a widely published despatch from Vancouver, dated December 30, Major Motherwell, chief inspector of fisheries, was credited with an interview in which he outlined certain changes in fishery regulations as having been agreed to and approved of.

In a telegram to the Colonist, the Department of Marine and Fisheries says that any such announcement is premature and unauthorized, and that no announcement of public policy will be made until Mr. Found's report has been received and considered by the Minister and other members of the Government. The telegram says: "Any announcement of the nature alleged to have been made by Inspector Motherwell was entirely premature and wholly unauthorized. A fairly thorough investigation of conditions affecting the fisheries industry in British Columbia was recently made by the director of fisheries, Mr. Found. He only returned from the Pacific Coast a few days ago and has not yet submitted his report. Until this is done and the report fully considered by the Minister and the other members of the Government, no announcement of public policy will be made."

However, to write to each purchaser would increase the amount to be deducted from the receipts, so it is hoped that the public will accept his acknowledgement of its assistance and thus allow the greatest amount possible of money to be spent in the tuberculous work.
