PROBLEM OF LEAVING LAND

TENDENCY TO CONGREGATE IN CITIES DISCUSSED BY DUKE OF NEWCASTLE AT JASPER

JASPER, Sept. 26.— "In spite of the railways, the automobile, the radio and other modern means of rapid transportation and communication which have made the world so much smaller and has done away one would think, with the so-called loneliness of country life, one of our greatest problems today is that urge to congregate in cities." So said the Duke of Newcastle in the course of an interview at Jasper Park Lodge.

It was a great pity, he thought, that the British people were as a whole not more agriculturally minded and he felt the need of a more widely established system that would educate prospective emigrants in the ways of the farm life of the dominion.

As a farmer, the duke has a tract of land in Surrey which has been the hobby for years. He was keenly interested in all he saw along the Canadian National lines across the prairies. "I did not read a line on the train from Winnipeg to Jasper," he said. "I looked out of the windows and saw what I could of your farming methods. One thing that struck me was the lack of tractors, why do you use horses on these wide plains?"

Conditions in England, said the distinguished visitor, were steadily improving, although with taxation so heavy it was an uphill fight. One by one, the good country estates were disappearing but this was due not alone to taxation and death but to the change in outlook. Life in the country was going out of date. "One good thing the changes are bringing about," he said, "that everyone has to work. I believe in working."

The Duke of Newcastle was accompanied by his youngest daughter, Lady Mary and her friend, Miss P. Hunter, will remain in Jasper eight or ten days.

"I came here on the recommendation of my son, who was here last year," he said. "He told me it was the most beautiful spot in Canada, and I quite understand his enthusiasm."
