TRAIN RACED WITH A WOLF

Overtook the Animal and Driver Plans to Collect the Bounty

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Jan. 31.—Nelson Fulcher, 142 Almert Street East, engineer on the Algoma Central Railway, does not bother with the approved methods of wolf hunting when he goes after the animals. He runs them down with his train.

Since the Algoma Central was built north of the Sault, through what is probably the best big-game area on the continent, the trains have frequently come in contact with moose, deer, bears, wolves, foxes, and many of these animals have been killed when caught in rock cuts, on trestles, or confused by the headlights. But Fulcher's wolf hunt was staged in broad daylight and was speedily terminated.

ENGINE WAS BACKING

He backed his engine, No. 104, the one which took the Prince of Wales from Franz to Oba, in 1919, at 50 miles an hour against the fleet-footed wolf, and won out in about six telephone-pole lengths.

Fulcher left Frater, 102 miles north, about 20 minutes late. From Frater down to the Agawa Canyon there is a 11½ per cent grade for nine miles. About halfway down this grade, or at Mile 107, the train was just making a long curve into a rock-cut. The snowplows, which had been operating for the past two months, had piled the snow up until the line at this point resembled a long trough. Just as the train was entering the cut Fulcher saw a large wolf coming toward the train on a dog-trot.

CHALLENGE IS ACCEPTED

"I connot say whether he knew we were late or not," Fulcher says. "But, anyway, when he saw us he turned and made down the track, with his tail stuck out like a balsam brush and his mane flopping, as much as to challenge the speed of our big engine. I accepted the challenge for the race with Mr. Wolf, let the brakes off and applied full steam ahead. For the first two pole-lengths the wolf gained speed quickly and was around the curve far enough to be out of sight. For the next two pole-lengths we were both going strong at about 30 miles per hour. For the next two poles it was a very exciting race, but old Engine 104 had the advantage of a make-up of iron, steel and steam. We caught up to the wolf and ran it down. We will collect the bounty."

Fulcher says that in the area where he killed the wolf there were once numbers of deer, and he would see them frequently, but now one is seldom seen, while the snow shows many wolf tracks.

SPY BECOMES A BUDDHIST

Ignatius Lincoln to Deliver Series of Lectures and Lives in Retirement

PEKIN, Jan. 31.—Ignatius T. Trebitsch Lincoln, whose kaleidoscopic career includes service as a Church of England curate, member of the British Parliament and German spy during the war, has turned up in Pekin in his declining years and is devoting himself to a study of Buddhism.

Lincoln embraced the Buddhist faith in Ceylon after the war.

Described by those close to him as much broken in health and spirit, he arrived in Pekin last October and took quarters in a German hotel under the alias of H. Ruh. His incognito was maintained for a month, until newspapermen who had crossed his trail during his meteoric European days, recognized him.

Previously Lincoln had visited the British Legation, where he disclosed his identity, disclaimed any intentions of intrigue against British interests in the Far East and asked that the Legation do nothing to destroy his incognito. British officers, convinced of the harmless character of his visit to China, agreed.

When it became known that the quiet and studious Herr Ruh was really the internationally famous spy and intriguer, however, he was so besieged by newspapermen and others that he left his hotel, disappeared for several days and only recently returned to take up humble lodgings over a shop near the great Hata Gate. Here he denies himself to all callers except those he knows in connection with his religious studies, and only at rare intervals does he emerge to visit centres of Buddhist wisdom and piety.

Lincoln has asserted that he is preparing a series of lectures on Buddhism which he intends to deliver in Pekin.

It was in Ceylon in 926 that Lincoln learned that one of his sons, John Lincoln, was being tried for murder in England. The father raced back to England, but the speed of British justice made it a losing race, for the son was convicted and hanged before he arrived. Then, according to his own account, he returned to Ceylon.

QUICK DIVORCE GIVEN CHICAGO

Many Actresses Make City Headquarters so Are Residents

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Just why Chicago should have been chosen by several actresses during the past few months as the place to get divorces is not readily apparent to lawyers unless it be that the Illinois laws are reasonably broad and residential requirements not too strict.

Fannie Brice, the comedienne, was the leader in the most recent list of stage personalities to seek and obtain divorces here. There have followed through the past few weeks the divorce cases of Helen Menken, Marion Harris, Suzanne Caubert (Mrs. Crane Wilbur) niece of Sarah Bernhardt, and Evelyn Herbert.

Illinois' legal requirements for divorce remain as stringent as ever, said one attorney, but compliance with them leads in many instances to facility and speed.

Most causes require variously one or two years established residence, but one prominent comedienne recently divorced her spouse quickly because she found him with another woman. Illinois thereby had immediate jurisdiction thrust upon it, and when the husband raised no objection he was divorced without ado.

Many touring actresses play in Chicago two or three months each year, it was pointed out, and having no established home, formally indicate Chicago as their official residence. Upon each Chicago appearance the same residence is inhabited and in time comes to be recognized as the legal home. Then, should marital discord arise, suit for divorce legally can be instituted in Chicago.

Divorce suits are divided between two court calendars—one for contested cases and one for those in which there will be no fight. It is the latter variety which sometimes will permit an actress to rush here from New York, obtain her divorce and return east in time to miss merely one performance of her play, as in the case of Miss Herbert. Once a stipulation of no-contest has been filed by opposing counsel the actual divorce proceeding is a matter of minutes, although the steps leading to it may have required two years or more.

PALACE OF FRANCE ON FIFTH AVENUE CITY OF NEW YORK

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 31.—Erection of a "Palace of France" on Fifth Ave. at a cost of $20,000,000 is planned by a group of French and United States capitalists, Nichols Matolowitch, French financier, said upon his arrival here on the liner France.

The building is to be thirty-five storeys high, he said, and the greater part will be used as a hotel, mainly for French travellers. The first floor will be given over to moving pictures and showrooms to advertise French products. He said an invitation has been extended the President of France to attend formal opening of the building next year. Natolowitch would not give the proposed location of the structure, but said options would be taken up.

BORN AND MARRIED "IN THE CIRCUS"

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Famous circus families were united when George Sanger, a nephew of the late George Sanger, the greatest showman of his day, married Miss Florence Isabel ("Poppy") Ginnett, at St. Mark's Church, Kennington. The bride is a daughter of the late Emile Frederick Ginnett, who also won renown as a circus proprietor.

The couple have known each other since childhood. A boy-and-girl friendship sprang up, and later mutual admiration of skill and daring in the circus drew them closer. Both were "born in the circus" and can scarcely remember when the first chance came of actually contributing to the thrills of the ring.

BUTTER FROM NEW ZEALAND

Imported Product Keeping Prices Down; Eggs up Slightly

A survey of the local markets this week provides little matter for discussion. Wholesale markets continue dull and sluggish and the same conditions are reflected in the retail stores. Continued supplies of butter from New Zealand has caused the price of Canadian butter to drop this last week. But to offset this the wholesale price of eggs has risen 3c also and if the continued cold weather continues particularly back east, it is just possible that the price of eggs will rise still further.

Beef prices continue high and it does not appear there is any hope for beef prices even to stay at the present high levels and increases from time to time may be looked for.

Hot house rhubarb is again appearing as a harbinger of Spring although it has not the sturdy appearance of the later open air stalks.

LESSONS ARE TO BE GIVEN TO GIRLS ON COURTSHIP AND CAREER

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Courtship, career and calories in ten lessons are to be offered Chicago young women by the Y.W.C.A. Experts will tell them how to be happy on $1,500 a year; how to avoid divorce; how to make husbands happy at breakfast and how to greet them when they return home at night.

Successful marriage, according to Mrs. Gladys Jenkins, under whose supervision the course will be given, "is not based on love in the sentimental sense, but on psychology."

"We shall instruct our girls," she said, "in personal charm; when not to wear kid curlers, for example."

NEW PICTURE FOR CANADIAN GALLERY

OTTAWA, Jan. 30. — In connection with the recent purchase by the Canadian National Gallery of "The Repentant Magdalen," by Paul Veronese, the great Venetian painter, the Ottawa Journal says:

"With the addition of this picture the Venetian School at the National Gallery becomes strong. The large, 'Christ with Angels,' an earlier work by Veronese, already in the collection, together with the 'Magdanel' presents this artist as finely as anywhere in America, while the three Tintorettes, a Moroni and an exceptional Sebastiano del Piombo complete an unrivalled group of this school."
