HANDICRAFT WORK

Now that plans are being made for the coming winter, the suggestion of the Terrace Women's Institute is an excellent one. They plan taking up some form of handicraft work, such as glove making or rugmaking.

We suggest that either men or women might well devote their time to the perpetuation of the native handicrafts of this part of the country such as basket making or wood carving. Of these possibly the baske making is the most interesting. The native designs are very artistic and the baskets could be made of such shape and size as would enable them to be used for modern purposes. The designs might further be incorporated in house furnishings and wall decorations. There is every facility here for studying the designs and possibly improving upon them.

The whole idea of taking up handicraft work during the fall and winter months is an excellent one. Groups of girls, married women, mixed groups and even groups of men might find much enjoyment from making something artistic or useful rather than idling away the time.

CUSTOMS OF MEN AND WOMEN

It has often been a subject of wonder why men should st idle during winter evenings while women sew or darn or do art needlework. True they add to the prosperity of the tobacconists but that is incidental. If they did some work they would add to the prosperity of someone else, improve themselves and possibly become so expert at their hobby that it would be a source of gratification if not of real financial profit.

THE GREATEST EXPORT ROUTE

(Edmonton Bulletin)

Vancouver now claims to be the largest grain-exporting port in Canada, and claims also that more grain left Vancouver and Prince Rupert for oversea destinations during the past year than went from all the eastern Canadian ports together.

Vancouver not long ago celebrated the shipment from that port of the eighty-millionth bushed of last year's wheat crop. Allowing for wheat shipped from that port since that time, and for the year's shipments from Prince Rupert, it is probably not far off the mark to say that one hundred million bushels of wheat have been shipped via the Pacific during the season. If Vancouver's present claims are correct, something less than two hundred million bushels must therefore have been exported during the year from all Canadian ports. This is less than half the amount which was available last fall for export. The inference is that, as in former seasons, more than half the crop of last year went out by way way of United States Atlantic ports.

Quite evidently reduced grain rates on the Transcontinental have not produced the hoped-for result of diverting Canadian grain traffic from the United States ports to Canada's Atlantic outlets. But the splendid record of Vancouver and Prince Rupert is proof that these Canadian ports are the outlets for Alberta's rapidly expanding output of wheat. The westward route is now Canada's greatest wheat export route.
