CLASSES OF PEOPLE

The world is more or less divided into two classes. Those who are educated and those who are not. There are also people who are cultured and people who are not, people who are rich and people who are not. There are people who belong to the so-called learned professions and people who do not. There are the socially elect and those who are not. In every case some are and some are not and the question of being it or not being it is largely a matter of birth and environment.

Now and then we see a man struggling out of his environment and becoming a leader, a lion, rich, cultured and educated and finally one of the socially elect, in spite of the accident of birth. The cases are comparatively few. Today, however, there is more opportunity than ever for a young man or young woman to succeed.

In the question of professions, it is tending toward a point where all will be equally esteemed. The quality of the work will be what will count. The man who digs a ditch well, who sweeps a floor well, who does any kind of work well will be looked upon as a better man than he who is a poor lawyer, a poor doctor, or a poor preacher. Riches will not be so greatly esteemed as they are today. Even as it is we look with suspicion on the very rich because we know well they could not have earned their riches.

We have in the past spoken of a "working class" and as the members of that class acquired a little education and culture they have rebelled against the stigma and become socialists. They have cried out for equality. Of course they will not get recognition in that way. They will get it through the natural process of evolution and that is toward a point where all legitimate occupations are equally esteemed if the work is carried out in a workmanlike and artistic manner.

COLLEGE EDUCATION

The college education today seems to tend to keep the classes apart but that is true only in a few cases and it is usually the college graduates that come from the working classes who are most snobbish. The university should have a broadening effect, else it is not a true university. Graduates should be the most democratic people in the world. They should know something about the work of all classes, all religions, all sects, all world movements and all those things which tend to make for the betterment of the race and the ultimate solution of our difficulties.

FILLING UP CANADA

The filling up of Canada with immigrants merely that the population may be increased so that business may be better and taxation lessened will not mean more business or less taxation, according to Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, who in addressing the Montreal Canadian Club indicated that such a policy of immigration would not live up to expectations. He sounded a strong note of warning against a "wide-open" idea of immigration. The minister was of the opinion that the first task in Canada is to make agricultural conditions as prosperous as possible, so that there will be a contented agricultural population. In throwing out a suggestion to provincial governments, he expressed the opinion that provinces should look after placing settlers brought in by the Federal Government, even if it means that Ottawa made payments to the provinces to that end.

ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT BY LOCAL BOY SCOUTS

Enjoyable and Interesting Function Last Night with Major McMorde Presiding

The Third Prince Rupert Troop of Boy Scouts held its entertainment and camp fire in the Elks' Hall last evening with Major McMorde presiding. The boys gave a good account of themselves in presenting the program which included a blind fold boxing bout also a round or two between Bob Houston and Sam Currie. Demonstrations in First Aid were also given. An exercise "Ten Little Rupert Scouts" was effectively rendered. The program was interspersed with vocal solos by Mrs. P. C. Miller and Mrs. H. Forrest and a violin selection by Kathleen Bulger and a song by Mr. Vandewater. Mrs. Black gave a pianoforte solo and also acted as accompanist for the evening. All these numbers were well received.

The final event was the gathering of the whole troop of scouts and cubs around the camp fire where songs and story telling was indulged in. Much merriment was created by a visit from "The Farmer" who proved a versatile entertainer both as a musician and impersonator. This was ably performed by Harry Astoria.

In bringing the program to a conclusion, the chairman complimented the Scoutmaster on the good work being done among the boys. The troop under P. C. Miller's leadership showed good training. The singing of the National Anthem brought a pleasant and enjoyable evening to a close.

Man in the Moon

The most infectious thing in the world is the art of smiling.

You may have heard of the man who could not find his clothes the morning after, when he awoke aboard the steamer. He told the steward he was sure he had stowed them into a cupboard with a little round glass door on it.

If you have nothing to say, there is no need to let all the world know it by insisting upon talking.

There really is no need to go to the Arctic to make discoveries. There are more things happening in Prince Rupert than most people imagine.

A real lazy man is one who never even gets spring fever.

The proprietor of the bath house at the beach had a somewhat gentle way of breaking bad news. He sent the following letter to the wife of one of his patrons: "Mrs. Curtis: Your husband's bathing suit was washed out to sea this morning and it will probably be impossible to recover it. P.S.—Your husband was inside it."

"What a ripping time!" Exclaimed the lady spectator as she watched the rugby match in which some of the players and their jerseys almost torn off their backs.

There's nothing so chilling as a bank manager's "Sorry."

At a lively business pace
And borrowed fifty thousand
On nothing but my face.

Perhaps you'd like to try
To imitate my plan
You earn your thousands first and then
You borrow if you can.
