eastbound passenger train for Smithers to attend the funeral of the late Captain Stephen Middleton who lost his life in a railway accident near Houston on Tuesday night.

Captain Middleton was the youngest son of the late Reginald Middleton, of Notting Hill, London, a well known civil engineer, famous at the time in connection with the construction of the famous Forth Bridge, in Scotland.

His son was at London University when war broke out and soon after received a commission in the Royal Garrison Artillery. He was severely wounded in the great German advance of March, 1918. Later he served with the Imperial forces in Ireland.

More recently he has been "roughing" it in the interior where he has mining claims but was planning to return to England next year. He is survived by his mother in England, three brothers, Fairfax a civil engineer of London, Cunliffe in India, Gervase, Lieutenant-Commander on the H.M.. Nelson and two sisters.
