

Perspiration Odour so unpardonable so easy to banish

What quality is so attractive as personal charm . . . and what social fault so obnoxious as perspiration odour.

Every person perspires, of course. It's natural, it's healthful. Physicians say the perspiration of the average person measures between one and two pints daily. Nature takes this way of ridding the body of impurities through the millions of tiny pores of the skin.

But perspiration need not be objectionable. Lifebuoy Soap, used in the bath, banishes the odour. Lifebuoy's creamy, mild lather, not only cleanses, but also purifies the pores—antiseptically—and keeps them sweet, open and breathing.

To Keep Well

Drink plenty of water, perspire freely and banish perspiration odour with Lifebuoy Soap.

Make sure of avoiding the needless social error of perspiration odour. Use Lifebuoy Soap, for hands, face and bath.

Low in price—wonderful in results.

WHITE PINE WAS KING

The early history of the lumbering industry in Canada is practically the history of the lumbering of white pine. In the early days of lumbering, the white pine was considered the main, if not the only, tree of value in the forests. It was the premier lumber tree, and for years held first place as lumber-producer both as to quantity cut and the value of the product.

BRAVEST DEED OF THE YEAR

GOLD MEDAL TO WORKMAN WHO SAVED HIS COMPANION IN QUICKSAND

LONDON, March 14.—The Stanhope Gold Medal of the Royal Humane Society has been awarded to Ernest T. Johnson, Manchester, for the bravest deed of the year, the facts being as follows:

Two men, David Inglis and Ernest T. Johnson, were working in a trench which was being excavated in the garden of Mayvern House, Manchester. The trench was 16 feet deep, the subsoil at this depth being quicksands. Without warning the trench suddenly collapsed, partially burying Johnson, and completely burying Inglis. Johnson could easily have released himself, but realized that if he did so Inglis would have been suffocated, as he was entirely covered, only his hair showing, and he decided, at the risk of his own life, to remain where he was and thus try to save his mate. He had constantly to scrape the earth away from Inglis's head so that he could breathe, and at the same time carry the weight of the crumbling earth above, and so prevent a further collapse. Assistance was summoned, but owing to the shifting nature of the sands, it took eight hours before the men were finally got out, and during this time the weight of earth Johnson was supporting forced him down to where Inglis was buried, making his position one of the greatest danger. The Salford Fire Brigade assisted the men with lifebelts, as the danger of the shifting sand rendered the work of rescue most difficult.

COMMUNISM IN LABOR UNIONS

(Canadian Unionist)

When, in the immediate expectation of a world revolution, men found a political organization, it is too much to expect them not to interfere also in trade union organization. Therefore, after the constitution of the Communist International in 1919, its leaders founded first a "Trade Union Council" and then a "Red International of Labor Unions." This latter body has secured the affiliation of the mass of the trade unions in Russia and in China; in Norway and Italy it did so only to lose its adherents again. The history of the Red International can indeed be put in a quite short paragraph. The adhesion of the Russian unions was automatic. The Chinese Red unions were spontaneous supporters, but nobody knows what adherents they count now. They have a "Minority Movement" in England which claims 900,000 members, but in fact at a Trade Union Congress cannot muster more than 190,000 sympathetic votes. In Italy the trade unions first adhered, then withdrew, were split, and then were extinguished by Fascism. In Germany, the "R.I.L.U." had some ephemeral influence, now at an end. In France it has split the movement into three parts. In Norway the unions have adhered and then almost violently rejected it. Elsewhere, it had and has no importance.
