SOCIALISM IS EXPLAINED BY E. T. KINGSLEY

Speaker at Theatre Advocated Settling Differences by Ballot Box, Not Strikes.

At the Westholme Theatre last night E. T. Kingsley gave an interesting address on Socialism under the title of "Civilization, Slavery and the State."

He dealt with the growth of capitalism and the wage slaves and strongly advocated settling the differences between capital and labor at the ballot box.

The speaker said that the whole world was in turmoil. There was a vast wave of unrest sweeping over it. There were industrial troubles and in many countries rebellions. In others there were mutterings. There was a serious problem to solve and it was not solved the whole of the present civilization would go down in collapse.

Wage Slavery. Mr. Kingsley then traced the development of the present system explaining how wage slavery followed bond slavery and claimed that the working class was just as completely enslaved today as in the days when Greece and Rome were at the height of their power. The farming class did not work for wages, but to some extent exploited labor, yet the product of the farm was exploited by the capitalist class, in that the farmer had to accept the price that was set.

The lecturer then went on to explain that the only property there was consisted of property in human slaves. Prince Rupert would not be worth a nickel except for the working people. Money consisted of promises to pay. It was an order on tomorrow. The only way to get rid of the capitalist system was by the Bolshevik route by which they would wipe all promises to pay off the slate.

Mr. Kingsley claimed that the workers could not own property because they themselves were property and property could not own property. Slaves could not own anything. They might think they owned it but they were mistaken. Let them once get the idea into their minds that they were slaves and it would be a long time before they would go on strike again because nothing could be settled by that route. Their masters might grant them privileges but not their rights.

The State. The state overshadowed everything. It was the instrument by which the slaves were held in subjection. It only conserved the interests of the master class. All the state knew was suppression. Every shadow they saw was Bolshevism. People pointed the finger at Flavelle, but if it was right to take one per cent it was right to take one million per cent. They could not excuse themselves by calling down the big men. It was impossible to fix prices, because everyone knew that the condition of the market fixed prices and not human edict.

Mr. Kingsley then dealt at some length with the cost of living and made fun of the idea of extending credits to foreign countries in order that they might buy our goods and pay cash for them. The joke was that there was no such thing as cash. Sooner or later the whole thing would go down in collapse.

Conquer the State. "No government can stay in power after two thirds or three quarters of the people turn against it," continued the speaker. Just as soon as the working class moved it would conquer the state without taking a gun or anything else. He said he favored another war any time but he would let the working class stay at home and furnish the guns and machine guns for the employing class to fight with. A game of seven up might answer the purpose just as well as a war, however.

terrible would be done as in the French revolution. Their cause, however, depended on reasoning faculties. Eventually it would sweep away distrust. The cause of labor was the cause of humanity.

How Everyone Can Help

THE Government has developed a liberal and broad plan to help soldiers settle on farms. It is securing land. It is granting substantial loans. It is obtaining advantageous prices on equipment, implements, building materials and live stock. It is providing agricultural training and farming supervision.

That is as much as the Government itself can do. But the plan needs more. It needs a community spirit of co-operation.

Already Provincial Governments, Universities, Farmers' Associations, and Veterans' Associations are giving valuable assistance. Many manufacturers and sellers of farm supplies have agreed to allow the soldier settlers special prices. Many successful farmers have willingly worked on Qualification Committees which have to pass on the applicants. Men who have had experience in lending money on farm property are serving on Advisory Loan Committees, judging land values.

But even such practical assistance is not enough. In each community farmers can be of real service to the soldier settler. They can give him advice about local conditions. They can lend him an extra horse or plough, give him a day's help at seeding or harvest time, and extend to him that friendly, neighborly, respectful spirit which he deserves.

In this way Canada is performing a double duty. It is discharging, as far as possible, the debt we owe to our soldiers; and it is adding to the country's chief industry a body of competent, willing producers.

Full information about lands and loans for soldiers will be sent on request to the Provincial Superintendent, Soldier Settlement Board, Rogers Building, Vancouver, B. C.
