CATALA BIG REPAIR JOB

Extent of Damage to Coaster Revealed in Visit to Vancouver Dry Dock Where Reconditioning Going on

(Vancouver Province)
With the drum fire of rivetting "guns" and the hiss of blue flame, an army of artisans at Burrard Drydock is clearing away the twisted metal from the gaping hole in the starboard side of S.S. Catala, permitting an excellent view of the damage wrought.

Fifty-nine new plates are to be bolted into position to take care of the bottom shell which was ripped out from stem to engine-room amidships. The interior floors and tank-top are badly strained and twisted. All frames on the starboard side amidships have to be renewed as they are twisted and kinked where the vessel listed on the rocks. All plates amidships have yet to be removed right up to the main deck.

As one walks through the side into the stokehold one finds her two water-tube boilers slung in the air with inch cables, while the one side of the ship is being renewed. The foreman boiler-maker with his crew speaks with nineteen years' experience when he contends that these two boilers bring an interesting job to the city.

No few than 3820 tubes are to be installed in these boilers hung in the air. As one gazes through the stokehold floor down on to the ways, the sag of the entire fabrication makes this appear as a very interesting marine repair contract.

ENGINES IN SLIME
Passing into the engine room one gazes on a sight guaranteed to break the heart of any chief engineer. Nothing quite equals the mess of an engine room that has been submerged. The grease and slime from the bilge, plastered both port and starboard engines with ooze that has taken two weeks of steam hosing and swabbing to remove. The engines suffered little if any damage, it is presumed that the film of oil on all pistons and bearings will have prevented any corrosion effects of salt water.

On the main deck an army of ship joiners is renewing the whole of the starboard staterooms, ruined by immersion. The magnificent dining saloon is a wreck as is the ladies' saloon, where even the ceiling panelling is being renewed. The wreck and the mass of rusty strings of the piano that has been swishing around this submerged section bears mute testimony of the position of the vessel. It is expected

SIR JOHN SIMON WHO IS NOW RETIRING WAS CLEVER AS A COUNSEL

Many stories are being told of Sir John Simon who is now retiring from practice at the English bar.

In his early career he was briefed to defend three men charged with burglary. A witness for the prosecution said that he could identify one of the men as having bought some brown paper from him six months previous to the trial. The case was adjourned to the following day, when Mr. Simon asked the witness if he could identify anyone in the court as a customer he had served on the previous evening. The witness could not do so. "You don't remember my coming into your shop last night and buying from you two pennyworth of tin-tacks?" asked the counsel. "How then can you profess to recognize customers who visited your shop six months ago?"

TERRACE FAIR STOOD HIGH

Next to Prince Rupert in Northern and Central B.C. According to Judges

TERRACE, Feb. 14. — Coming at a time when the future life of the Terrace Fair Association seems to be hanging in the balance, the judges score card reports for 1927 fairs should prove of interest to local exhibitors, and it should be noted that comparisons with other fairs places Terrace very much in the foreground. Each score represents the standing of the fair to its community or district, 100 points being the ideal. There were 55 fairs held in the province. Terrace obtained 79.3 of an average on all points, only twelve other fairs being higher. In the fruit and vegetable class the score was 92%, the highest in the province.

In grains, field crops and potatoes 72%, with twenty fairs higher. In livestock, 76%, with eleven higher. In poultry only 44%, with 36 higher. In dairy produce and honey, 60%, with 20 higher.

Domestic science and ladies' work, 80%, with nine higher.

Support of fair by local exhibitors, 94%, only three higher.

Grounds and equipment, 70%, with 32 higher.

Interests of the public in exhibits and judging, 84%, 17 higher.

Management 89%, 11 higher.

Comparison with other fairs in our own circuit places Terrace almost on a par with Prince Rupert and much ahead of any of the others. The averages for the district were:

Prince Rupert	79.5
Terrence	79.3
Prince George	53.2
Smithers	50.7
Quesnel	47.5
