THE THING THAT COUNTS

A while ago Great Britain and the United States had a conference. They talked for a few weeks and at the close of that time the at the whist drive and Mr. Kuboff, the Davis Mines Ltd. delegates went home and said they could not agree. Each wanted to spend more money on warships than the other would consent to.

But when they got home they began to hear from the people. On both sides of the Atlantic there was an aversion to building up too strong a fighting machine. Britain led the way by announcing that for this year at any rate she was going to do just what United States wanted. President Coolidge did not take any notice of that but urged that there be a big navy such as the United States requires the Silver Cup mine on Nine Mile inspector was a business visitor here for defense. The President's proposals are ignored and the two countries are now in a position to talk business and arrange any old treaty they wish.

It is good to see the real heart of the two greatest countries in the former for selling and the latter the world expressing itself.
