Premier Mackenzie King Speaks of Peace and League of Nations at Banquet in his Honor Ottawa

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—“Were it not for Canada the continent of North America alone of the continents of the globe would not be represented at the League of Nations. Canada's voice at the League is therefore very much the voice, not only of this continent, but, to express it another way, of the new world.” In these words Premier Mackenzie King, one of the Dominion's representatives at the recent sittings of the League in Geneva, spoke of the position of the Dominion in the League before a distinguished and non-partisan audience at a complimentary banquet in his honor last night.

Those who gathered to hear the Premier included Conservative Leader, R. B. Bennett, members of the Dominion cabinet, Judges of the supreme court of Canada, British High Commissioner Clark, and dignitaries of the church.

“With the signing of the peace pact of 1928 in Paris, it seems that the whole work of the League of Nations gained fresh emphasis and that the position of the League in international affairs assumes an importance even greater than that which it has heretofore had,” he said. The influence of the treaty for the renunciation of war, which the Premier signed on behalf of Canada, had, Premier King stated, permeated these years' proceedings of the League. “It is now, as never before, the League's business to see that those events which make for war, as for example competitive arming between nations, are combated as strongly as world public opinion can be made to combat them and that in their stead are substituted beneficial means which allegiance to the gospel of peace and goodwill alone can afford.”

Sir George Foster, in introducing Premier King, referred to the “most effective and most loyal manner” in which the Prime Minister had represented Canada in the endeavor for peace.
