COVERING THE FIELD

For the first time in its existence The Daily News may be said to properly cover the district in such a manner as to give advertisers the best possible returns for the money expended. During the campaign over eight hundred new subscribers have been added to the list and a number of the communities have been covered practically one hundred per cent. The campaign has cost The Daily News a good deal of money and the advertisers will get the benefit of this in increased publicity.

This is a time for local firms to reach out for business and they can do this through the medium of our advertising department.

LOCAL MERCHANTS AND FARMERS

Some of the local merchants are inclined to take issue with D. D. Munro in regard to their efforts to do business with the farmers of the interior. They state that it is true that most of the fruit and vegetables used in the city come from the south but they allege that the fault is entirely with the farmers who have no idea of marketing their produce properly and often they ask prices higher than those paid for goods coming from the state of Washington which have to be shipped to the coast, reshipped to this side of the line, duty paid, and then shipped again to Prince Rupert. Some Central B.C. growers ship their produce in sacks and many who use boxes have no sense of honesty in the packing, concealing inferior quality fruit or vegetables underneath the top layer. So say the merchants.

It seems to be the local opinion that a campaign of education is needed among the growers to teach them how to pack and market their goods.

Doubtless there are cases where out of town shippers have been used badly by merchants but all these things can be righted. What we suggest is that the farmers study well the matter of packing and shipping their produce and that a close watch be kept upon merchants who do not treat shippers well and that farmers blacklist them and report the case to the local board of trade.

It is possible that there might be a committee of the Prince Rupert Board of Trade whose duty it should be to foster better relations between the farmers and merchants and this might possibly also be a committee of investigation to whom could be reported any cases of alleged unfair dealing on the part of local merchants. There must be some way of making it possible for interior growers to ship to the Prince Rupert merchants. People in the city want the produce of the Skeena and Bulkley valleys and the people in the country want the nearest and best market. The market is here so it is hoped an effort will be made to cultivate each other and to develop the output of the farms and gardens of the interior.

unlocked it and made the final count, which required work well into the night.

During the week dozens of envelopes were placed in the ballot box. Many of the workers continued canvassing until the last moment and just before the campaign was formally declared closed all envelopes from the post office were placed in the sealed ballot box.

Start Vote Counting

The judges began their work at nine o'clock and finished only after hours of strenuous work. They found hundreds of subscriptions and thousands of coupons collected by friends of the candidates. Every receipt, check, money order, bill or coin was carefully checked and the results were totalled. It was a smiling, cheerful and hard-fought battle this campaign of The Prince Rupert Daily News.

All hopes to the hustling candidates who worked so hard to obtain the prizes.

The utmost accuracy was observed by the judges in tallying each candidate's vouchers and votes, and to say that it was a difficult and most tedious task is putting it mildly. Very fortunately, the men who served as judges were all accustomed to the handling of figures and to accounting with the greatest exactness and this made it possible to complete the count with promptitude.

Thank Judges

To these very competent judges, who worked so carefully last night in the task of counting the ballots cast, The Daily News wishes to express its sincerest thanks. The management is grateful indeed to them for their work.

The Daily News also wishes to take this means of expressing its thanks and gratitude to every candidate in the list for their part in making the big campaign the rousing success it has been. Starting out very slowly, indeed, for a while it looked like a dismal failure, the big campaign became faster and more interesting until it became the most talked-of subject in the entire district.

It is doubtful if there was a home in the entire limits of the territory served by The Daily News that was not keenly interested in the success of some of the candidates toward the home stretch.

Every individual candidate, regardless of his or her standing in the list, should feel mighty proud today of the hundreds and hundreds of friends who valiantly supported them throughout the campaign. The support that was given the different workers proved beyond question that each neighborhood and each community was represented in the campaign by one of its most popular persons.

It would be impossible, according to the judgment of the management of the campaign, to go through the country adjacent to Prince Rupert and throughout the city itself and select a like number of men and women who possess more friends, or are more popular in their communities, and neighborhoods than the men and women who competed in The Prince Rupert Daily News campaign.

Again the management wants to thank these enterprising hustling candidates for their earnest work. And let it be said right here, that if in future The Daily News can express their appreciation in a more substantial manner, or if The Daily News can be of any service to any of these splendid people, all that is necessary is for the wish to be made known to the management. The Daily News wants the candidates in this campaign to appreciate how they have widened the influence of this paper and how greatly they have assisted in its growth for the past few weeks, and, regardless of the big prizes that have been awarded The Daily News is at the command of every candidate at any time it can be of service in any way.

Candidates represented two districts, of which one was Prince Rupert City proper. In this way it was possible for persons living in various communities to solicit among their neighbors and friends. This accounts for the fact that it was possible for a candidate living, let's say, in any particular district, to secure more votes than some other candidates in another territory and yet not receive an equal prize.

All candidates who remained active during the campaign and failed to receive a big prize, have had checks sent them to cover a commission of 10 per cent. of the money they turned in during the entire campaign.

More than anything else the management of the campaign appreciates the expression of the various candidates in the office, winners and losers, about the fairness and squareness of the entire campaign.

It has been the constant aim of the management to conduct the entire campaign on an absolutely unquestionable plan, to make it fair and square in every detail to everyone. And it is gratifying to the management to know that these efforts have been appreciated from the complimentary remarks and the expressions of everyone who has visited The Daily News office and campaign headquarters.

Man in the Moon

When advice is so cheap one wonders how doctors and lawyers manage to live so well.

Be like a piano. A piano is upright, grand and square.

Modernism carried to extreme is exemplified by the cow that always strayed into town and flirted with the tobacco signs.

VANDERHOOF

W. De'fam of London, England, who has hunted big game in South Africa, Australia and other parts of the world, is now on a similar expedition in this district, having outfitted from Douglas Lodge. David H. Hoy is his guide and J. C. Stafford, his cook, the party also consisting of three Indians and seven horses.

Mrs. Roscoe Day and Miss Barbara Day of San Francisco are leaving, this week after having spent two months as guests at Douglas Lodge on Stuart Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil D. Multhead of Fort St. James were visitors in town last week.

A son was born at Stuart River last week to Mr. and Mrs. James Careau.

Extensive improvements are being made to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McCorkell, the work being in charge of Frank and William Bowman.

It is upon them that the schemer preys! The lure of easy money is almost irresistible and the savings of a lifetime are often gambled away, unknowingly, in unfortunate speculations.

Even the husband and father, anxious to leave his family well provided for, often becomes the victim of some get-rich-quick scheme. Almost without exception, the results are failure and disappointment.

When the head of the home is taken away, a hundred enticing baits are set for the estate he leaves behind. With the vision of winning financial independence for her children and herself, the widow falls prey to ignorant or unscrupulous advisers.

There is one safe, sure method of protecting your loved ones after you are gone . . . the creating of an adequate estate through Life Insurance. And, by arranging for its payment in the form of a regular income for your widow, you can guard her for as long as she may live.

Let a Life Insurance representative explain to you how easily and safely you may provide for the future of your family.
