FEW CHANGES IN MARKET PRICES

Winter Varieties of Apples are Now offered—Sugar and Butter Prices Down

The month of November is marked with few changes on the local retail price list save for the disappearance of a few seasonal fruits and vegetables and the appearance of a few other kinds. The orange market continues stiff but, with the advent of tangerines about the end of this month and new citrus crops soon thereafter, some relief may be expected. The lowest price obtainable in most of local stores now is 40c straight and then there is not much in it.

The popular McIntosh Red apples will soon be over with the winter varieties of Spitsbergen and Winter Banada taking their place. There have been a few Gravensteins from Terrace sold here this fall and even ungraded boxes have proven to be just about as good an apple as can be imported. If this year's quality may be taken as any criterion, the Terrace Gravenstein should have possibilities of proving very popular here.

There is a slight softening in the local sugar market and butter prices are also down.
