Forest Products Of the District.

In his speech to the Board of Trade on Wednesday some parts of the speech of American Consul Wakefield were held over because of lack of space. These parts will be used editorially from time to time during the next few days. Dealing with the forest products of the district the consul said:

"During the progress of the war, now brought to a happy close, we all had an opportunity of appreciating the value of the forest products which will in future years provide the markets of the world with lumber, pulp and paper. It was discovered suddenly that spruce was the very best material for the wood required in aeroplane construction and that the B. C. spruce was quite the best in the market for the purpose. Millions of dollars were spent in getting this spruce out and the results justified the expenditure. Just how far the expenditures were justifiable Germany prevented from becoming known by signing the armistice.

"What would have happened to Germany in another few weeks would have certainly convinced her that she slightly underestimated the power opposed to her and would have convincingly demonstrated that the world is not to be the football of any individual power in all the years to come.

"Today spruce lumber is being shipped from Prince Rupert and neighboring points to the eastern seaboard and the freight is equal to the cost of the lumber on the sticks here. Some demand for your spruce, is it not? And the industry is merely in its swaddling clothes. There is a mill down at Ocean Falls calling for an investment of over ten millions. Is that an infant industry? Some infant! Another at Swanson Bay with a very large plant as such plants are listed. With the almost inexhaustible supply of pulp wood in this vicinity and the ever-increasing demand for paper, is it likely that this field will be neglected? I'll say 'No.'

"I am sure you will all agree with me that the city is most fortunate in securing a firm such as that operating the mills at Seal Cove. This firm is a distinct addition to the business life of this city and you all heartily wish with me that the firm may long remain here."

Archbishop's Counsel Regarding Reforms.

Vast reforms do not come in a day. The great danger of the hour is impatience, says F. H. Du Vernet, archbishop of Caledonia. There will always be inequality in the distribution of wealth, but excessive inequality is a social injustice. Economic laws are not fixed by nature, they can be regulated by man. How to bring about a more equitable distribution of wealth is the problem which must be faced without delay, but it must be faced with wisdom. In scores of different ways the competitive system is giving place to the co-operative system. To keep pace with these changes the wage system must be modified. The more complex our industrial life becomes the more necessary will it be to combine interests. Both on the side of the employers and on the side of the employed will collective bargaining, in an ascending scale, be required until the principle of sectional competition finally gives way to the principle of universal co-operation, and the Christian spirit of brotherly fellowship and mutual service gets a fair opportunity to express itself in action. It is well to keep before us an ideal system, but it is well also to be clear in our minds as to the best method of approach.

The revisionary method aims at creating public sentiment through the agency of the press, the school, the union, and the church, which will bring such pressure to bear in a constitutional manner that our present inadequate laws will be revised and progressive legislation enacted which will gradually bring about a more equitable distribution of wealth. This method avoids the sudden dislocation of the whole commercial world with its inevitable misery. This is the British way.

The revolutionary method aims at the sudden overturning of the present capitalistic system. It is primarily a destructive policy and so of necessity comes at once into conflict with constitutional authority. It has no well defined constructive policy, and so even if successful in overthrowing the present order of things years of crude experimenting with visionary theories must lapse before a better order of things could be established upon a firm foundation. This is the Russian way.
