NORTH IN OPPOSITION

Prince Rupert and, indeed, four out of the five ridings in Northern British Columbia, find themselves on the Opposition side of the Legislature now. There they will be for the next four years. There need be no great trepidation over the fact. The north is at least represented by men of presents and fighters such as the Opposition should have, Pattullo, Manson, Wrinch and Kergin all have made good on the Government side. They all possess talents which should lead to similar success in their new status. How they act under changed conditions, none of them have ever sat in Opposition before, will be followed with interest. We expect of them not to be mere political obstructionists but to support the Government where they find the Government is doing well and rightly by the country and particularly by these ridings. On the other hand, they will be expected to exercise all their powers of opposition when the government might propose to do something that it was not for the welfare of the province or of these ridings. That is the duty of the Opposition—a duty which if it fulfills will be recognized by the province as the whole and the districts its members individually represent. With one of their number probably in the role of lead of the Opposition, the Liberal group from Northern British Columbia should still be in a strong position and capable of giving effective representation on behalf of these ridings.

DAME ELLEN TERRY

Probably no family in the history of the modern stage can count so many men and women possessing a high order of histrionic ability among its members than that of the late Ellen Terry. Kate Terry, Ellen's eldest sister, was one of the leading emotional actresses of the Victorian era. Ellen was the second daughter. Her next sister, Marion Terry, made her debut in 1873 and became a noted English actress. Florence Terry, youngest of the four sisters, went on the stage in 1870 in Charles Reades version of Moliere's "Le Malade Imaginaire." She died in 1896. There were two brothers. Charles Terry became a prominent theatrical manager and had a daughter, Minnie who became prominent in juvenile roles. Fred Terry also met with success on the stage.

Ellen made her first appearance as a child on April 28, 1856, playing with Charles Kean in "The Winters Tale" at the old Princess's Theatre of London. Queen Victoria, Prince Albert and the Princess Royal were in the audience and Ellen Terry really began and ended her stage career in the sunshine of royal patronage.

She wore a little red and white coat and a row of tight, sausage curls clustered around her head. Her duty was to run about the stage with a small go-cart and carrying out her instructions with more vigor than discretion she tipped over the go-cart handle and fell on her back.

"A titter ran through the house and I felt that my career as an actress was ruined for ever," she said afterwards. "Bitter and copious were the tears I shed but I am sure that the incident did not materially alter the course of my life."

Soon afterwards she was engaged to play "Puck" in Charles Kean's revival of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Her sister Kate played Titania. Ellen appeared through a trap door in the stage at the end of the second act for a final speech. An impetuous stage hand closed the door too quickly, crushing her foot.

"I screamed," Miss Terry said, "and Kate rushed over to me and banged her foot on the stage. But the stagehand, mistaking the signal, closed the door tighter.

"Mrs. Kean rushed off the stage and made him release the door, then she whispered to Ellen:

"Finish the play, dear, and I'll double your salary."

Miss Terry spoke her piece and then fainted. When she was revived she saw a strange young man leaning over and assuring her that she "would get on." It was "a new actor" of whom no one seem to know anything except that his name was Henry Irving.

She found in Irving a companion spirit. The type of drama in which Irving yearned to succeed was precisely that which Ellen Terry found most to her taste. She cared nothing for the plays impregnated with the sordid actualities of life.

Her Ophelia was distinguished with the wonderful charm that made her Portia famous. She was careful to make it clear that Ophelia was a girl rather than a woman. Her art carried the complete innocence of the most ill-fated of all Shakespeare's heroines to superb heights.

Reviewing her life on the stage sometime before her death, Miss Terry said that it seemed "in some way to have passed as a dream. Is it not too bad that we must leave life when we are best fitted to enjoy it? If I had devised creation I would have had everybody born old and year by year grow younger, finally to pass away in innocent infancy."

CITY TO PUT IN MAIN FOR C. N. R.

FACILITY WHICH 1927 COUNCIL REFUSED IS TO BE GIVEN BY THIS YEAR'S BODY

Considerable discussion took place at last night's council meeting regarding a Board of Works recommendation that the water pipe connection on Sixth Street be extended to connect with the C.N.R. water main at Wayne Place. Alderman Collart thought that nothing should be done till the plans of the property holders had been submitted. The mayor stated that tentative plans had already been submitted. Alderman Brown said that this matter had been discussed previously but as the request had come so close to the end of the year it was felt better to postpone the matter. Alderman Rudderham pointed out that the main would not be constructed on private property. On a vote, the recommendation was agreed to. Alderman Collart voting against the motion. Ald. Collart wondered where the money for extension which would cost $700 would come from.

SPORT DRIVE FOR HOSPITAL

SUCCESSFUL EVENT IN AID OF THE QUEEN CHARLOTTE INSTITUTE - MANY DONATIONS

QUEEN CHARLOTTE CITY, July 24.—The annual sports and drive on behalf of the Skidegate Inlet Hospital was held recently at Queen Charlotte City and proved one of the most successful events ever held in the history of the Hospital. The arrangements were in the hands of the Queen Charlotte Board of Trade. A general holiday was declared and settlers from all points of Skidegate Inlet and many miles along the east coast arrived in cars and launches to participate in sports for both old and young. The picnic grounds, stores and dwelling houses were all gaily decorated with bunting and flags and a regular holiday spirit prevailed. The ladies of Queen Charlotte assisted by others from outside points served a splendid lunch on the grounds, which helped considerably to swell the takings of the day. The local O.G.I.T. Girls' stall and bran tub also netted nice little sums. A dance in the evening brought to a close a most successful day.

Below is a list of the wholesale merchants and friends who responded to an appeal for funds to help equip the hospital which will shortly be opened in charge of Dr. G. A. C. Roberts, who is now en route to Queen Charlotte from Toronto:
