CULTURAL EDUCATION

Prince Rupert is deeply indebted to a few faithful teachers who ing the round trip on the steamer train the young folks and inculcate in them a love for music. They Prince Charles. work quietly and sedulously and the results they obtain are well known to most people. The fact that they are paid for their work does not cancel the obligation. The city has been particularly fortunate in the calibre of the men and women who have carried on this work. There have not been very many of them but they have done their work well and the city has been immeasurably benefited.

THE TEACHING PROFESSION

There are the other educationalists that teach the young people in the schools who also are deserving of special mention just! now when the work of the year has closed. We do not realize how much depends upon their efforts. If they do their work well, the whole community benefits and if they shirk, the community suffers. not, ary weather of the past few weeks

During the past week there has been a good deal of discussion in regard to a few members of the teaching staff whose work has been up for consideration by the board. There is a feeling in some quarters that these teachers have not been well treated. It ket and the Magoon berries will be is openly stated by many that the school board has been mistaken ready in a few days. The raspberries and the axe has fallen in the wrong quarter. Teachers who were also badly in need of rain and desobtaining excellent results have been let out and others retained site the fact that many berries were whose work was much more subject to criticism.

It is very hard for tecahers that their fate should be in the crop if rain comes in time to bring hands of possibly only one person and that one liable to strong prejudices. In some provinces the teachers' organization has a say in the matter and can step in to protect the members of their profession whom they think are really doing good work. Here the organization has not assumed to interfere. We suggest that in cases where there are strong protests or where it is possible an injustice has been done, the board should reconsider the matter and investigate more thoroughly. There are so many methods of judging work and the methods of good teachers differ so greatly that care should be taken that there is no injustice. It has been the custom of recent years for Prince Rupert school board to relieve a good many teachers from their duties until this place has become known as one of doubtful tenure.

We all know that the work of a school trustee is a most difficrit one but at the same time when he or she undertakes that work, difficulties must be expected. When a teacher gets an excellent report from the inspector or from the principal of the school and then very soon afterwards is relieved of duties it makes them wonder if a report is worth anything. Also it is noted that while a principal reports on the members of the staff under him there seems one, especially if it is a solitary idea to be no one to report on the principal.

Hon. V. W. Smith of Alberta, brother of Arthur Smith of this city, is a great booster for the Peace River country. In a recent address at Lethbridge, he said; "It reminds me of the old days in southern and central Alberta when every train was full, every hotel was full, and new settlers were lucky to find a sleeping place on the pool tables or the station floor. Trains going into the north go loaded to capacity, three to five hundred people going in on every train.
