TRAGEDIES IN FARTHER NORTH

Child Terribly Bitten by Dogs and Gashed in Sixty Places and Died Later

EDMONTON, Feb. 8.—A special despatch to the Journal from Fort Smith says:

It has been a winter of tragedy in this part of the north, no less than three tragic deaths having been reported—all of them children.

Most terrible of these was the death of William Pinsky's four-year-old girl, who lingered for two weeks before dying from the effects of dog bites.

An Indian woman happened to look out of her window and saw the dogs dragging the badly mangled child across the snow.

TWO OTHER TRAGEDIES

News of the second tragedy was brought in by Alec Louitt, fur trader from Resolution. This was the death of a school boy at Hay River mission, after having been struck on the head with a block of wood while playing in the basement wood chute.

A little Indian girl near Resolution was the third victim to be reported. Standing too close to the fire in her father's tepee, the girl's clothing caught fire.

TRAPPER'S CABIN BURNS

Joe Tarangue, Fort Smith district trapper, lost everything he possessed in a fire which destroyed his cabin four days' journey from here.
