Provision for Fishing Industry.

The fishing industry is the best asset Prince Rupert has, not only the best but the most easily developed. Very few citizens of Prince Rupert realize that in 1914 there were only about two score fishing boats operating from this port, whereas at present there are over 600 registered here. This fact alone is sufficient to show that Prince Rupert is fast becoming the greatest fishing port on the North Pacific.

Prince Rupert people are vitally interested in the development of the fishing industry here and all their efforts should tend towards the accomplishment of such an important aim. More boats are bound to make Prince Rupert their port of attack and facilities should be provided for them, not after they come but in order to get them here.

The independent fishermen and fish buyers especially need some kind of facilities which will guarantee them the best price for their fish, or allow them to ship it themselves on the eastern market if they so wish. The present cold storage even enlarged will be too small in a very short time to cater to all the business that will come this way.

We also have to consider the situation which has arisen in the past through lack of bait and ice in this port when the G. T. P. Railway had to sell their own ice to the fishermen, and the most serious situation of the present year when, owing to the strike so many fishermen had to dispose of their fish at Butedale, Ketchikan, Vancouver and Seattle, getting a very small price for it and a very poor return for their labor.

Shortage of cars is always likely to occur and therefore the fisherman ought to be assured that he can always land his fish and store it here whatever happens.

When the fishermen feel that they can locate here safely as far as selling fish is concerned, they will come in increasing numbers both to the benefit of the fishermen themselves and of the merchants and all the community, because this is the only natural place for them.

Good Market For the Product.

There is no industry with a better market outlook than the fishing industry at present and for years to come. Europe will provide a good market and meat is going to be high in price for many years. In the Allied countries in Europe, out of ninety-eight million head of cattle eighteen millions have been destroyed during the war, or one-fifth of the entire stock. In Roumania there are no horses nor cattle left, and out of sixty-nine millions of pigs thirty millions have been sacrificed.

Fish is the natural diet to take the place of meat in Europe, where the population cannot afford to buy meat at high prices. Any kind of fish will find an outlet in Europe, especially in the southern countries like Italy and the Balkans. Italy took all the American pack of salmon for 1918.

It is an undeniable fact that any undertaking which is the means of increasing the food production is bound to be a financial success. The market is always eager for good fish of any kind and all the fish that can be caught can be sent into eastern Canada and the United States and fetch good prices.

Japan is a good market for fish and the United States has already started a good trade there. South America at present also is a good field. So is Mexico, where the Japanese are selling smoked and dried fish, Barbadoes, Jamaica and all the West Indies are equally good markets, and since the opening of the Panama Canal, products from this part of British Columbia ought to be landed quickly and cheaply at any port of the Atlantic.

Present Cold Storage Is Good Institution.

The Canadian Fish and Cold Storage plant has done an immense lot for Prince Rupert and its usefulness has only commenced. With its increasing capacity it is bound to do more business and be a profitable undertaking. That is as it should be. If there were an independent cold storage here, however, many more fishermen would come to the port as any suggestion of monopoly would be taken away. The present institution would not do less business but the port would do more.

F. B. Moffett, F. B. Allen and F. B. Moffett, Jr., of Weyburn Sask., arrived from the east on last night's train and will be here for a few days before continuing their journey.

There were a large number of through passengers on the train yesterday evening. All were complaining of the sweltering heat experienced all the way across the prairies and expressed great delight in being able to at least feel comfortable again.

Norris Pringle, who was expected to arrive home on the train last night, will not come until Sunday night. He left Toronto on Saturday or Sunday night but it is thought that he may have stopped off to visit with friends or else has not made good connections.

A family of real interior Indians stepped off the train last evening. In rather gaudy garb the mother with her little baby on her back strolled along the platform wearing her low moccasins whilst the other members of the happy group straggled along a little in front.
