Great Coal Miners' Strike is Continuing in England with Little Abatement in Sight

Men Return to Save Mines from Destruction But Yorkshire Remains Out; Military Intervention is much Discussed and Publication of Secret Circular makes Sensation.

(Special to The News via G. T. P. Telegraphs.)

London, July 24.—The fourth day of the great coal miners' strike brought no sign of a settlement. Almost 25,000 men have laid down their tools. There are 10,000 out at Nottingham and Derby, while 10,000 in Monmouth and 7,500 of Lancashire workers went back to save the mines from destruction.

Premier Lloyd George and several members of the cabinet conferred with the miners yesterday and the premier will probably meet the officers of the Miners' Federation today.

The triple alliance of labor, composed of railwaymen, transportation workers and miners, met in London behind closed doors and registered a vote of 217 to 11 against conscription participation campaigns and the intervention of the military force in Trades Union disputes.

The most important news of the day is that soldiers are to be used to protect the sailors working at the mines. The use of military force for any purpose connected with the strikes is a policy which the unions bitterly oppose, and have made their opposition the chief planks in their platform.

The disclosure of a labor paper recently of a secret circular which the War Office sent to officers stating what would be the attitude of soldiers in the event of their being called upon for strike breaking has produced a sensation.

The pumping and engine men of three southern Yorkshire collieries apparently on their own initiative have offered to resume work. Ten thousand men on strike besides, have offered operatives to return to keep the works open to prevent floods.

At Luton, where the town hall was burned, the disturbances were quelled by the police. At Coventry many shops were attacked and forty persons injured, some dangerously, and police assistance was sought from Birmingham. At Bilston the mob tore down a wall and used the bricks as missiles against the police.

London, July 24.—The tender spot in British political life is the dispensation of titles. The new Nationalist party has taken up the question.

Page Croft charges that a member of Parliament was created a peer after the beginning of the war and subscribed shortly after a large sum of money to a newspaper that supports the peerage.

He further says that titles were granted to a politician of so notorious a character as to be unfit to be a candidate for parliament, to another politician regarded as unscrupulous and to a third man previously involved in a notorious social scandal.

Page Croft offered to prove all the charges he made.
