Elsie McLuhan Proved to be Splendid Entertainer

when Miss Elsie McLuhan of Winnipeg held an appreciative audience for nearly three hours swayed between tears and laughter. life as a slave and demands what-ever she wishes of him and he immediately grants it but the second girl sees him killing one back and fear enters in and she puts in words "I am afraid" and instantly he turns from a wilcringing slave into a cruel driving master who lashes her to death for bowing to him. To the first girl he is a beautiful humble slave and to the second a hideous, overbearing monster.

The Florist Shop was uproariously funny and was so well por-trayed that it was possible to visthe three main characters. Miss McLuhan divided her entertainment into three parts. The first part consisted of the selection "How the La Rue Stakes were Lost," a race horse sketch; "A toast to the Ladies Aid:" "My Village Characters," which was screamingly funny, and "The Ship of Faith," a negro sermon. The second group consisted of 'The Slave with the Two Faces' and the troubles of a boy who had to take a bath every night. The third series comprised a reading on "The urge of the Infinite" and another illustrating the ever present urge for friendship called "Jim and John" and the one-act play "The Florist Shop" and concluded with "The
